JONES ENTERS GUILTY PLEA
IN U. S. COURT

Former Assistant Cashier of City National Bank Admits

CLEMENCY IS ASKED

District Attorney, Defense Attorney, President Remington Join in Request

Judge Miller this afternoon sentenced Jones to serve three years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas.

Chester A. Jones, 25, former assistant cashier of the City National bank of Bismarck, today pleaded guilty to embezzlement in the United States district court before Judge Andrew Miller. Sentence was to be pronounced this afternoon.

Pleas for clemency were voiced by District Attorney M. A. Hildredth, George Bangs, one of Jones' attorneys, and P. C. Remington, president of the bank. Judge Miller questioned J. D. Troop, of the National Banking department, who had aided in the preparation of the government's case as to the manner of the embezzlement, and then took the matter of sentence under advisement for a few hours.

The case, after various preliminaries, had come to a point today where it would have gone to trial.
The bill of particulars demanded by the defense had been furnished by the government late yesterday.

It was understood that one of the final breaks in the case was that last night bondsmen of Jones surrendered him to the authorities, and the government came into possession of a statement to the effect that the $5,000 for Jones' cash bill had been furnished by Jones.

Will Make Return.
It was stated in court by District Attorney Hildredth that Jones would make a substantial return of the money taken. The $5,000 will be returned immediately, it was understood.

The case has been hanging fire since last September when the arrest was made. A preliminary hearing was held later and the case set for trial at this term. A motion to quash the indictment and a demurrer were overruled.

The government had witnesses here from many cities, and two representatives of the national banking department had been working here on the bank books for sometime.

It was known that the government was prepared to introduce witnesses to say that Jones had speculated in bonds and foreign securities, including some German municipal bonds.

First suspicion in the case,
however, occurred last September when Jones purchased two automobiles in succession, trading in the first on the second, and the alleged speculation was not known at that time.

Jones retained his remarkable composure in court, though looking haggard and worn. His brother, who lives in Indiana, was here with him.

District Attorney Hildredth, in his statement to the court, said it was his conviction after a careful study of the case that Jones was not a possibility for Jones to escape conviction on trial.

The district attorney said that President Remington of the bank was not vindictive in the matter and that his attitude throughout had been more as that of a father than one seeking to have penalties imposed.

When the case was called in federal court about 1920, the district attorney said it was his understanding that Jones desired to plead guilty to the first count of the indictment. Jones told the court this was his desire. The district attorney said all other counts may be dismissed.

"I feel very deeply for this young man," said the district attorney. "As far as I have been able to examine into the matter, previous to this embezzlement he has borne an excellent reputation."

He said that Jones by industry and application had worked up to the bank to a position of trust.

"For that reason, I don't know why he began to take money," the district attorney said.

The system used, he said, was "deceptive and shrewd" and indicated careful planning.

No Chance to Escape.
"I have gone over the matter with painstaking care with the national bank examiner, and it is my firm belief that there was no chance for the defendant to escape on trial. Not only was the actual accounting of convincing nature but other circumstances as well."

"I have talked to the president of the bank, who has had a very high regard for this young man. I don't think I have ever met a man who has shown a finer spirit of generosity during the matter than has Mr.
Remington, although I never knew him before. His attitude throughout has been the attitude of a father toward this young man and he has not been vindictive in the least."

"I feel justified in asking leniency in this case, and I hope the court will deal leniently with the defendant."

George A. Bangs of Grand Forks who, with P. D. Norton, was attorney for Jones, said that "I feel

Most of Deaths Occur in Western Tennessee—House

Chicago, Mar. 13. Red Cross representatives, public officials, and citizens were at work today retrieving the salvage, human and otherwise from the wreckage in the storm which swept over the middle west.

Reports at noon placed the loss of life in the devastating March fury yesterday at forty-four.
Nearly 220 were reported injured.
The combination of blizzard wind, snow and rain, and the first thunder storm left damage, tragedy and heroism in its wake.

Red Cross ministrations were given today at Pinson and Deansburg in Western Tennessee where thirty of the 300 or more people were killed and hundreds of others injured in the
munities erect.

Among nine killed in northern and western Kentucky, three persons, Wm. Hall, his little daughter, and an infant girl were killed when a house with 13 occupants was torn from its foundation and carried 30 yards away, where it was rent asunder.

"Feder hill," near Bardonia, the home where Stephen C. Foster achieved fame by writing the song
"My Old Kentucky Home," was unroofed.

In Wisconsin only one death was recorded. A Milwaukee man dropped dead after a battle with the storm.

Ohio where only two deaths were reported, and Iowa and Michigan which escaped fatalities were chiefly affected by damage to communication lines as well as building and other property.

When the case was called in federal court about 1920, the district attorney said it was his un-

GUMMER CASE
SUPREME COURT

Arguments of Attorneys To Be Made in Case Here on Wednesday

NO TESTIMONY, THOUGH

The appeal of William Gummer, youthful Fargo hotel clerk sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Marie Wick in a Fargo hotel, will be heard by the State Supreme court here tomorrow. The case, the second on the calendar for the day, probably will be reached in the afternoon.

The Gummer appeal, which is perhaps the most important of the cases on the short March calendar of the court, set a large part of Bismarck agog when rumors spread that all of the evidence in the case taken at the Valley City trial would be taken again here in the high court. Numerous inquiries by both men and women who wanted to hear the case were met with the discouraging information that the high court would consider only the arguments of the attorneys and receive their briefs, and that the argument would devolve chiefly on uninteresting legal points as to the sufficiency of the evidence on which Gummer was convicted.

All of the exhibits in the case, including many gruesome photographs and the bed on which the girl was found tied, gagged and slain, are reposing in the statehouse basement and probably will not be produced in court.

Judge Johnson, who was the Attorney General at the time of the Gummer case, is disqualified, and Judge A. G. Barr of the district court will sit in his stead.

Arguments today
The court today was to hear arguments in the appeal of Peter Oster and Barbara Oster in a case against the county auditor of Renville county and the appeal of the county auditor of Renville county in the matter of the application of Una Walker for a mother's pension.

Mrs. Walker received a pension in Renville county and moved to Ramsey county, it being her contention that the pensions should continue even though she changed the county.

Residence of the county auditor is disqualified, and Judge A. G. Barr of the district court will sit in his stead.

Taking Stump and Urge Destruction of British Empire

London, Mar. 13.—Belief that further Irish raids are impending in Great Britain persist although it is generally reported that the persons considered most dangerous were gathered in last week.

The Daily Express says that Free State detectives have been working for months in co-operation with Scotland Yard. They became acquainted with most of the details of the gun-running and other schemes, attending most of the secret meetings of the plotters.

The Morning Post says that Countess Markievicz has taken a prominent part in these meetings. It quotes her as saying at a recent gathering that the Irish Republic chance was imminent, and that the support of many other countries could be expected.

The destruction of the British Empire was the scheme of other reported meetings, while troubles in India and Egypt were cited as aiding the Irish Republican aspirations.

It seems that women have been particularly active in the Irish cause in Great Britain, adopting many clever disguises.

One or two Irishmen held for trial yesterday for unlawful possession of ammunition had in possession a letter which referred to having sent 20, 000 rounds of ammunition from Dublin.

Am not in position to get German rifles and ammunition," the letter adds. "Must wait boat from Germany."

TWO EXECUTED.
Dublin, Mar. 13.—Michael Crevey and Henry Kerman, Republicans, were executed today.

They were arrested after a raid on a bank at Old Castle, and were convicted of possessing arms as well as well as a large sum of money.
Crevey was a leader of the Irregulars.

there are constant rumors of attempts to drive mines under the

The only member who has re-who is 85.

Dr. Sigerson, a famous physician, was in the Senate. He re-his property. He was quoted as saying he did not mind threats of assassination, but threats to burn his home were a different matter, because of the patients there.

"Oriels" Organized
In addition to the open warfare in Dublin and throughout southern Ireland, there is a secret under-

The Irregulars set their infor-they call the republican cause.

To combat these, the Free State has set up a Criminal Investigation Department, popularly known as "the Black House," because of the building in which it has offices.

The Oriels have already established a reputation in Ireland simi-

London. Owing to their activities, tons of ammunition and masses of Irregular literature have been confiscated.

Dublin, March 13.—A government carrying on all the functions of a government, yet a government which has to keep itself behind barred doors in its own capital—this is one of the striking anomalies of the Irish Free State.

The circumstance is not due to lack of government or to personal cowardice of government officials.
It is due to the kind of war that is being carried on against it.

The Dublin police force is a splendid body of men which keeps order on the streets and regulates traffic with ease. The Irish Free State army under General Mulcahy is a well-disciplined, well-equipped organization of 30,000 men, the proof of whose energy is that about 8000 regulars are in prison.

Paris, Mar. 12.—It is understood that a proposal to strip "the velvet glove" from the Ruhr occupation, augmenting the number of effectives there is soon to be considered by the cabinet in consequence of increasing the services in the occupied region. These manifestations are attributed to Nationalist Association.

Minister of War Maginot who recently visited the Ruhr will be able to furnish the government with full information as to the situation. It is pointed out that in the event "that an iron hand" policy is decided upon, it will be applied with strict moderation.—The Echo de Paris says that it has not been decided to revoke the death penalty for German hostages held as a result of the Boer killing.

The newspaper also declared that there is no intention of occupying Frankfurt or Darmstadt.

The Brussels conference between Premiers Poincare and Theunus is believed to have crystallized the position of the Ruhr allies, both as to question of administration program.

France and Belgium have served notice that they will evacuate the occupied territory, only as the Germans actually perform their repara-

The allies do not intend to accept bank has assets sufficient to pay all claims, according to an opinion rendered by the Bank of North Dakota by the Attorney-General's office, by George I. Reimstad, assistant.

The Bank of North Dakota, in its December 29, 1922, statement, lists
"receiver's" certificates, proof of claims" totalling $747,736.37.

The opinion says: "Although the decisions are not in harmony, the prevailing view seems to be to the effect that if the assets of the insolvent bank are sufficient for the payment of the principal indebtedness at the time the receiver took possession, interest should be paid before distribution of the surplus to the stockholders.

"Accordingly, we would say that if the assets of the bank are sufficient to pay all claims, both principal and interest, interest should be paid on Receiver's Certificates."

Escanaba, Mich., March 13.—No instead as the young woman who perpetrated one of pathology's

For 22 days the recipient of hundreds of telegrams, letters and postal cards from all parts of the country while her fever was reported officially by attending physicians as having ranged from 114 degrees upward, Miss Lyons was said today to have found the excitement which accompanied her three weeks' treatment and the subsequent exposure of her trick of touching the thermometer to a fresh-colored hot water bottle was too much for her.

In consequence she was reported hysterical with an actual temperature of 104 and a possibility that death might follow her protracted faking.

The score of more friends who during the height of the alleged fever prayed and worked for her recovery were not about the home

JONES ENTERS GUILTY PLEA IN U. S. COURT

Former Assistant Cashier of City National Bank Admits Embezzlement

District Attorney, Defense Attorney, President Remington Join in Request

Judge Miller this afternoon sentenced Jones to serve three years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas.

Chester A. Jones, 25, former assistant cashier of the City National bank of Bismarck, today pleaded guilty to embezzlement in the United States district court before Judge Andrew Miller. Sentence was to be pronounced this afternoon.

Plenary clemency was voiced by District Attorney M. A. Hildreth, George Bangs, one of Jones' attorneys, and P. C. Remington, president of the bank. Judge Miller questioned J. D. Troop, of the National Banking Department, who had aided in the preparation of the government's case as to the manner of the embezzlement, and then took the matter of sentence under advisement for a few hours.

The case, after various preliminaries, had come to a point today where it would have gone to trial. The bill of particulars demanded by the defense had been furnished by the government late yesterday.

It was understood that one of the final breaks in the case was that last night bondsmen of Jones surrendered him to authorities, and the government came into possession of a statement to the effect that the $5,000 for Jones' cash bill had been furnished by Jones.

Will Make Return.

It was stated in court by District Attorney Hildreth that Jones would make a substantial return of the money taken. The $5,000 will be returned immediately, it was understood.

The case has been hanging fire since last September, when the arrest was made. A preliminary hearing was held later and the case set for trial at this term. A motion to quash the indictment and a demurrer were overruled.

The government had witnesses here from many cities, and two representatives of the national banking department had been working here on the banks books for sometime.

It was known that the government was prepared to introduce witnesses to say that Jones had speculated in bonds and foreign securities, including some German municipal bonds.

The first suspicion in the case, however, occurred last September when Jones purchased two automobiles in succession, trading in the first on the second, and the alleged speculation was not known at that time.

Jones retained his remarkable composure in court though looking haggard and worried. His brother, who lives in Indiana, was here with him.

District Attorney Hildreth, in his statement to the court, said it was his conviction after a careful study of the case that there was not a possibility for Jones to escape conviction on trial.

The district attorney said that President Remington of the bank and that his attitude throughout had been more as that of a father than one seeking to have penalties imposed.

When the case was called in federal court about 10:30 a. m., the district attorney said it was his understanding that Jones desired to plead guilty to the first count of the indictment. Jones told the court this was his desire. The district attorney said all other counts may be dismissed.

"I feel very deeply for this young man," said the district attorney. "As far as I have been able to examine into the matter, previous to this embezzlement he has borne an excellent reputation."

He said that Jones by industry and application had worked up in the bank to a position of trust.

"For that reason, I don't know why he began to take money," the district attorney said.

The system used, he said, was "deceptive and shrewd" and indicated careful planning.

No Chance to Escape.

"I have gone over the matter with painstaking care with the national bank examiner, and it is my firm belief that there was no chance for the defendant to escape on trial. Not only was the actual accounting of convincing nature but other circumstances as well."

"I have talked to the president of the bank, who has had a very high regard for this young man. I don't think I have ever met a man who has shown a finer spirit of generosity in the matter than has Mr. Remington, although I never knew him before. His attitude throughout has been the attitude of a father toward this young man and he has not been vindictive in the least."

"I feel justified in asking leniency in this case, and I hope the court will deal leniently with the defendant."

George A. Bangs of Grand Forks, who, with P. D. Norton, was attorney for Jones, said that "I feel

The recent speeches advocating greater liberty for Moslem women which Kemal, the leader of the Turk Nationalists, has been making are supposed to be influenced in great measure by the lady shown here. She recently became the bride of the Turk leader.

STORM DEAD PLACED AT 44 LOSS HEAVY

Nearly 220 Were Injured in Terrific Blizzard and Tornado

SOUTH HIT HARD

Most of Deaths Occur in Western Tennessee—House Carried 50 Feet

Chicago, Mar. 13.—Red Cross representatives, public officials, and citizens were at work today relieving the salvage, human and otherwise from the wreckage in the storm which swept over the middle west.

Reports at noon placed the loss of life in the devastating March fury yesterday and Sunday at forty-four. Nearly 220 were reported injured. The combination of blizzard, wind, snow and rain, and the first thunder storm left damage, tragedy and heroism in its wake.

Red Cross ministrations were given today at Pinson and Deansburg in Western Tennessee where thirty of the 300 or more people were killed and hundreds of others injured in the storm, which left little of the communities erect.

Among nine killed in northern and western Kentucky, three persons, Wm. Hall, his little daughter, and an infant girl were killed when a house with 13 occupants was torn from its foundation and carried 50 yards away, where it was rent asunder.

"Feder hill," near Bardonia, the home where Stephen C. Foster achieved fame by writing the song "My Old Kentucky Home," was unroofed.

In Wisconsin only one death was recorded. A Milwaukee man dropped dead after a battle with the storm.

Ohio where only two deaths were reported, and Iowa and Michigan which escaped fatalities were chiefly affected by damage to communication lines as well as building and other property.

Chicago with two deaths due to the storm and the remainder of Illinois suffered much the same as Iowa and Michigan with heavy property damages. Lower temperatures were predicted for the middle west.

BOY'S NOSE CRUSHED BY KICK FROM HORSE

Page, N. D., March 12.—George Brack, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brack sustained a broken nose and injuries to his face when kicked by a horse on his father's farm south of this place. An X-ray revealed the bones of the nose were badly crushed. A surgical operation was performed in an effort to prevent permanent disfigurement of the young man's face. He is improving.

HORN MURDER CASE LIKELY TO BE UP AT MARCH TERM

Cando, N. D., March 12.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Horn of Cando, are expected to be tried for first degree murder at the Towne county district court term opening here March 19. The charge is made in connection with the death of the one-year-old child of Opheila Reid.

START SYSTEM.

Washington, Mar. 13.—The Federal Farm Loan board has completed all necessary steps up to the actual issuing of charters to the new government finance board, intermediate credit banks to put in operation the new credit system to aid the farmer. Commissioner Lobdell of the board said in discussing the plan of operation, temporarily at least, will be limited to nine months maturity.

LENINE SERIOUSLY ILL FROM STROKE OF APOPLEXY

London, Mar. 13.—A Reuters dispatch from Helsinki today says Premier Lenin of Soviet Russia has an apoplectic seizure yesterday. His condition is reported to be serious.

GUMMER CASE APPEAL UP TO SUPREME COURT

Arguments of Attorneys To Be Made in Case Here on Wednesday

NO TESTIMONY, THOUGH

The appeal of William Gummer, youthful Fargo hotel clerk sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Marie Wick in a Fargo hotel, will be heard by the State Supreme court here tomorrow for the day, probably will be reached in the afternoon.

The Gummer appeal, which is perhaps the most important of the cases on the short March calendar of the court, set a large part of Bismarck agog when rumors spread that all of the evidence in the case taken at the Valley City trial would be taken again here in the high courts. Numerous inquiries by both men and women who wanted to hear the case were met with the discouraging information that the high court would consider only the arguments of the attorneys and receive their briefs, and that the argument would devolve chiefly on uninteresting legal points as to the sufficiency of the evidence on which Gummer was convicted.

All of the exhibits in the case, including many gruesome photographs and the bed on which the girl was found tied, gagged and slain, are reposing in the statehouse basement and probably will not be produced.

Judge Johnson, who was the Attorney-General at the time of the Gummer case, is disqualified, and Judge A. G. Burr of the district court will sit in his stead.

Arguments today. The court today was to hear arguments in the appeal of Peter Oster and Barbara Oster in a case against Karolina Oster, from Emmons county, and the appeal of the county auditor of Renville county in the matter of the application of Una Walker for a mother's pension.

Mrs. Walker received a pension in Renville county and moved to Ramsey county, it being her contention that the pensions should continue even though she changed the county of residence. The court also had on its calendar the appeal of Thomas N. Henderson and J. L. Dill and others in a case against Thomas A. Colter, from Ward county; the case of Herman Backhaus and R. R. Hogue against the county commissioners of Emmons county, involving contracts, which is appealed by the former; the case of the First Guaranty Bank of Bismarck against the Rex Theater company, for re-arrangement; and the cases of Carl Miller vs. Ed Caffrey from Logan county and the state against Clifford A. McCarty from Hettinger county.

Four Judges Decide

In the case of the First Guaranty Bank against the Rex Theater company both Judge Christianson and Nusselle are disqualified, and because of the fact that most district judges are busy at this time, Judge Burr alone is called in this case. If there is equal division among the four judges on decision, it is understood the case will be submitted to another district judge on briefs to gain a majority decision.

FRESH RAIDS IN IRELAND CONTEMPLATED

Free State Detectives Working in Conjunction With Scotland Yards

WOMEN VERY ACTIVE

Taking Stump and Urge Destruction of British Empire

London, Mar. 13.—Belief that further Irish raids are impending in Great Britain persist although it is generally reported that the persons considered most dangerous were gathered in last week.

The Daily Express says that Free State detectives have been working for months in co-operation with Scotland Yard. They became acquainted with most of the details of the gun-running and other schemes, attending most of the secret meetings of the plotters.

The Morning Post says that Countess Markievicz has taken a prominent part in these meetings. It quotes her as saying at a recent gathering that the Irish Republic chance was imminent, and that the support of many other countries could be expected.

The destruction of the British Empire was the scheme of other reported meetings, while troubles in India and Egypt were cited as aiding the Irish Republican aspirations.

It seems that women have been particularly active in the Irish cause in Great Britain, adopting many clever disguises.

One or two Irishmen held for trial yesterday for unlawful possession of ammunition had in possession a letter which referred to having sent 20,000 rounds of ammunition from Dublin.

"Am not in position to get German rifles and ammunition," the latter adds. "Must wait boat from Germany."

TWO EXECUTED.

Dublin, Mar. 13.—Michael Crieve and Henry Kernan, Republicans, were executed today.

They were arrested after a raid on a bank at Old Castle, and were convicted of possessing arms as well as a large sum of money. Crieve was a leader of the Irregulars.

CALL ISSUED TO GOOD ROADS MEN TO MEET

State-Wide Gathering To Be Held in Bismarck Friday Afternoon

Notice of a meeting of the North Dakota Good Roads association to discuss future activities was mailed today to all of the 3,500 members in the state by J. E. Kauffuss, secretary. The meeting will be held here Friday afternoon, March 16.

The object of the meeting is to discuss among the association's legislative program in the presidential primaries next March. Mr. Kauffuss said. Reports continue to be received, he said, indicating a great interest in the good road movement.

Not only have the Irregulars at times shot at the buildings but there are constant rumors of attempts to drive mines under the streets and the buildings.

The private residences of some of the cabinet members have been burned. Others have received threats.

So far these have had little effect upon either the government ministers or the members of the Dail Eireann.

The private member who has resigned has been Dr. George Sigerson, who is 85.

Dr. Sigerson, a famous physician, was in the Senate. He received a letter threatening to burn his property. He was quoted as saying he did not mind threats of assassination, but threats to burn his home were a different matter, because of the patients there.

"Oriels" Organized. In addition to the open warfare in Dublin and throughout southern Ireland, there is a secret undercover warfare.

The Irregulars set their information through devoted women who give all their time to what they call the republican cause.

To combat these, the Free State has set up a Criminal Investigation Department, popularly known as "Oriel House" because of the building in which it has offices. The Oriel men have already established a reputation in Ireland similar to that of Scotland Yard in London. Owing to their activities, tons of ammunition and masses of literature have been confiscated.

CRUSHING FATAL TO HOPE FARMER

Hope, N. D., March 12.—J. H. Nelson, farmer of near Hope, was accidentally killed. He and his hired man were filling a grain tank and as the tank started to slide on the ice Mr. Nelson went to the back wheel to hold it. Suddenly it gave way and caught him between the wheel of the tank and a building. His head was crushed by the blow and he died soon after.

COOL—AT FIRE!

While fire raged on the hospital roof at Lincoln, Kas., Dr. A. C. Johnson, shown here, calmly went ahead with a serious operation. Before he'd finished the blaze was quenched. The operation was successful. Yes, the patient lived.

OFFICIALS ARE PRISONERS OF OWN REGIME

President and Cabinet Are Closely Guarded to Prevent Assassinations

RECEIVE DEATH THREAT

"Oriels" Are Organized to Combat Irregulars' Woman Spies

By Milton Bronner

NEA Staff Correspondent. Dublin, March 13.—A government carrying on all the functions of a government, yet a government which has to keep itself behind barred doors in its own capital—this is one of the striking anomalies of the Irish Free State.

The circumstance is not due to lax government or to personal cowardice of government officials. It is due to the kind of war that is being carried on against it.

The Dublin police force is a splendid body of men which keeps order on the streets and regulates traffic with ease. The Irish Free State army under General Mulcahy is a well-disciplined, well-equipped organization of 30,000 men, the proof of whose energy is that about 8000 irregulars are in prison.

Guerrilla Warfare

But the Irregulars are elusive. They bob up near Cork one day, near Dublin or Wexford a few days later. They come out of the fog and vanish into the mist. The hillside know them and the waste places. And you can't tell who is an Irregular.

At the request of the army, therefore, the president and his cabinet are living under guard in government buildings. This is to prevent any further occurrences like the killing of Michael Collins.

Not only have the Irregulars at times shot at the buildings but there are constant rumors of attempts to drive mines under the streets and the buildings.

The private residences of some of the cabinet members have been burned. Others have received threats.

So far these have had little effect upon either the government ministers or the members of the Dail Eireann.

TO CONSIDER HARSHER RULE IN RUHR ZONE

Visit of French War Minister Indicates Change in General Policies

WON'T ACCEPT PROMISES

Allies Declare Germany Must Live Up to Reparations Contract

Paris, Mar. 13.—It is understood that a proposal to strip "the velvet glove" from the Ruhr occupation, augmenting the number of effective troops there is soon to be considered by the cabinet in consequence of increasing the services in the occupied region. These manifestations are attributed to Nationalist Association.

Minister of War Maginot who recently visited the Ruhr will be able to furnish the government with full information as to the situation. It is pointed out that in the event "that an iron hand" policy is decided upon, it will be applied with strict moderation. The Echo de Paris says that it has not been decided to invoke the death penalty for German hostages held as a result of the Boer killing.

The newspaper also declared that there is no intention of occupying Frankfurt or Darmstadt.

The Brussels conference between Premiers Poincare and Theunies is believed to have crystallized the position of the Ruhr allies both as to question of administration program.

France and Belgium have served notice that they will evacuate the occupied territory, only as the Germans actually perform their reparations obligations.

The allies do not intend to accept German promises, they demand action.

Attempt Three Wrecks

Brussels, Mar. 13.—Three attempts to wreck trains on the railroad line over which Franco-Belgian coal must be hauled are reported today in news despatches from Aix La Chapelle district.

In one of these instances a time bomb was exploded tearing up the tracks. An accident was averted. The entire railway system in the district now is being inspected and guards have been stationed along the line.

COUNTER ACT PROPAGANDA. Brussels, Mar. 13.—The French and Belgians believe they have dealt a big blow to German propaganda in that they have reported officially by attending physicians as having ranged from 114 degrees upward, Miss Lyons was said today to have found the excitement which accompanied her three weeks treatment and the subsequent exposure of her trick of touching the thermometer to a flesh-colored hot water bottle was too much for her.

In consequence she was reported hysterical with an actual temperature of 104 and a possibility that death might follow her protracted faking.

The score of more friends who during the height of the alleged fever prayed and worked for her recovery were not about the home today. She still was a subject of acute interest as the tale of the "illness" which fooled Upper Peninsula doctors brought an army of newspaper correspondents and photographers here and the interest throughout the country became known generally.

Used Hot Water Bag. Accepting the invitation of Dr. Defnet to come and see for themselves and to help him solve the mystery, Dr. Morris Fishbein and R. D. Woodyap of Chicago examined the 27-year-old former nurse and found no indications of fever in body fluids although readings made in the usual manner indicated fever of 114 or more degrees.

Leaving the room after having placed a thermometer in Miss Lyons' mouth they watched without the patient being aware of it. From the folds of the bed clothes, they said, she lifted a tiny hot flesh colored water bottle, touched it to the bulb and then replaced the thermometer in her mouth.

It then became known that when Dr. Defnet and other physicians attempted to take her temperature, Miss Lyons had tossed about the bed and writhed as if in agony, shook the thermometer from her mouth and in the gyrations touched the bulb to the hot water bottle.

Was Only Joking. Enclosed behind the locked doors in her small home to bar the "I told you so," of passing neighbors who had helped her in her illness, Miss Evelyn Lyons, Escanaba fever girl whose ingenious methods raised the temperature of dozens of clinical thermometers to the limit for thirty-one days penetrating one of the strangest hoaxes in history sat up and related to the press correspondents why she had fooled the hundreds who came to see her during the notorious case.

Evelyn was herself this morning although she still was very ill and registered a fever of 100 degrees, this time correct.

"Well I hardly know what to say," she said.

Charles Root, living near the Fort Berthold reservation, was acquitted in brief time by the jury. William Heiser of Selbridge, also was acquitted. The jury in this case returned a sealed verdict, which was opened today.

Charges against J. F. Demery of near Fort Yates were dismissed.

GIRL FAKES TEMPERATURE; FOOLS DOCTORS

Upon Discovery Becomes Hysterical and Registers 104 Degrees

DEATH MAY FOLLOW

Reaction After Disclosure Results in Serious Illness—Kept Hoax Up

By Milton Bronner

NEA Staff Correspondent. Escanaba, Mich., March 13.—No longer known as the girl who lived despite the highest temperature reported in medical history but instead as the young woman who perpetrated one of pathology's greatest hoaxes, Miss Evelyn Lyons was reported today in a serious condition.

For 22 days the recipient of hundreds of telegrams, letters and postal cards from all parts of the country while her fever was reported officially by attending physicians as having ranged from 114 degrees upward, Miss Lyons was said today to have found the excitement which accompanied her three weeks treatment and the subsequent exposure of her trick of touching the thermometer to a flesh-colored hot water bottle was too much for her.

CHANGES IN LEGISLATIVE BOUNDS VOID

Executive Says House Bill Fair in Part and Unfair as to Two Counties

OTHER VETOES MADE

Total Number of Vetoes, Excepting Appropriations Hits Six Measures

Governor R. A. Nestos, acting on the last bill of the eighteenth legislative assembly before him today, vetoed the reapportionment bill.

In disapproving this measure, which passed the legislature on a strict party vote, the Governor said that while the reapportionment was fair in most respects, two districts had been overlooked in the enactment and took the view that the whole reapportionment question ought to go over until the next legislature. The executive also took the view that the reapportionment ought to provide for a smaller number of members of both house and senate.

Three other vetoes by the Governor brought his total number of vetoes to six bill out of about 352 reaching him from the legislature, excluding the appropriation bills. Every bill was acted upon, none being permitted to become laws without action by the executive.

Bills vetoed included house bill No. 226, permitting country agricultural lands to charge up to $2.50 per acre per week tuition; senate bill No. 323, repealing the practice of certified public accountants and house bill No. 166 providing a cause of action on account of injury should survive the death of the injured if death were from some other cause.

Governor Nestos in disapproving house bill No. 312, the reapportionment bill, wrote the Secretary of State as follows:

Reasons For Veto. To the Honorable Secretary of State: I file herewith House Bill No. 312, being an act to amend and reenact Section 44 of the Compiled Laws of North Dakota for the year 1913, as amended and reenacted by Chapter 4 of the Session Laws of North Dakota for the year 1915 as amended and reenacted by Chapter 2 of the Session Laws of North Dakota for the year 1917, relating to legislative apportionment, without my approval for the following reasons:

The constitution provides that at the first legislative session after each census, the state shall be divided into senatorial districts as nearly equal to each other in the number of inhabitants entitled to representation as possible, and that a general reapportionment shall be made at each census. This should have been done in 1921, but it was not attended to. In my inaugural address, I recommended that it be done at this session and that the number of senators and representatives be decreased.

The above act on the face of it purports to make a general reapportionment, but a careful investigation of the provisions of the act reveals the fact that while there have been fair and proper changes in a few districts, that the act has failed to correct the inequalities existing in other districts, and is therefore not just and equitable throughout.

Part of the Fair. It is apparent that it was fair and just to join Grant and Sioux counties in one district. It is also apparent that, since Emmons county is considerably larger than Sheridan and Kidder, it should be joined in the same senatorial district rather than Kidder and Emmons. It is just also to say that, as between McHenry and Stutsman counties, if either of them is entitled to two senatorial districts, it is surely Stutsman with over 24,000 people rather than McHenry with less than 16,000.

Those preparing the act, however, seem to have overlooked the fact that in the forty-first district, McKenzie and Williams with a total population of 27,524 are combined, though the Missouri river separates the two, and that if Stutsman county is entitled to two senatorial districts, surely McKenzie and Williams were entitled to be divided into two such districts.

NEW TRAIL TO BE ASKED SOON FOR SCHNEIDER

States Attorney Says He Will Move Case For an Early Disposition

DEFENDANT STAYS HERE

State's Attorney E. S. Allen today was preparing to go before Judge Ansonius and asked that steps be taken to fix a date for a new trial in the case of Kasimir Schneider, charged with having caused the death of his wife by poison. Schneider was a liberty today under his old bond, following the disagreement of the jury late yesterday afternoon.

The state attorney said he would seek a new trial as soon as possible. Beyond this he declined to comment on the case.

P. D. Norton, counsel for Schneider, in a statement declared that the reported standing of 11 to 1 for conviction by the jury did not represent the actual sentiment of that body. "The vote when they went in was six to six," he said. "During the argument only four of the jurors felt they could say beyond a reasonable doubt Schneider was guilty. As the merits of the case were argued in the jury room some of the jurors gained the impression from what occurred in the jury room and statements in the presence of jurors on the streets of Bismarck that one of the jurors was not a fair and impartial juror but was biased in favor of the defendant. This belief in the bias of one of the jurors caused the other jurors who in the beginning were in favor of acquittal to join forces with and vote with those in favor of the defendant's guilt. This situation left one juror who from the beginning favored acquittal standing alone."

Schneider will continue working in Bismarck, to be near his baby, one year old, now being cared for by a relative, Mr. Norton said. Schneider is working as a day laborer and never was paid the $2,000 life insurance policy carried on his wife, his attorney said.

Maintaining Schneider is innocent Mr. Norton declared that after consulting with the defendant for eight months and investigating the case he felt sure that Schneider was not responsible for his wife's death, though he said he realized the circumstances gave grounds for belief that Schneider did commit the act.

He declared the reputation and whole life history of Schneider argued against the state's contention. He declared that in the annals of criminology there has never been a case of murder by slow poisoning which was committed by a laboring man of the intelligence and education of Schneider, but when ever committed have been by persons familiar with handling poisons or able to judge the effect of their administration, and such crimes have been committed only by physicians, chemists, druggists, toxicologists, lawyers and ministers.

ay. Evelyn began, "only that have found out that the world's just full of hundreds of tender-hearted people who love one another. I know I did wrong in fooling the doctors and I am sorry. I knew from the start that I would have to come to a show town, but I was afraid to face it. "My hoax first entered my head when Dr. Perry, the attending physician turned his back to me and I touched the bulb to the hot water bag. When he saw the temperature registered he was overcome with surprise and took the reading again, and I again thought I'd fool him.

"I thought it a good joke on him, but I never thought of keeping it up. Then came news stories and letters from 'Nature fakers' from all parts of the nation. I was besieged with requests from the fakers who wanted me to let them heal me for consideration that would make me independent for life.

I was once a nurse, and I realized it all, but I determined not to let them profit by my weakness.

Mrs. Eva Milligan Passes Away Here

Mrs. Eva Milligan, aged 49, wife of E. J. Milligan of Beulah, died at 5:40 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the temporary residence in the Mahoy Plaza, 315 Fourth St. N. W., following an illness of four months, with nephritis.

Mrs. Milligan had been ill for some months and was brought to this city on December for treatment. Eva Chandler was born at Greenwood, Wis., and was married twelve years ago at Medford, Wis., to E. J. Milligan. They came to North Dakota in 1917 and located at Rhame where they resided for a short time later moving to Beulah where Mr. Milligan purchased a hotel which he rebuilt, named the Hotel Milligan and has since operated.

Mrs. Milligan was prominent in social activities of the Beulah district, was a member of the Methodist church and Royal Neighbors and had a host of friends.

Besides her husband, there are three sons by a former marriage, Roy Chandler, Rhame, N. D., and Guy and O'Reilly Chadwick of Beulah. The body was taken to Greenwood, Wis., yesterday morning where funeral services and interment will take place.

and the membership of the house to about seventy.

For these reasons, I withhold my approval.

Very respectfully,
R. A. NESTOS, Governor.

Tuition Charge Vetoed

In vetoing H. B. 226, regarding tuition for county agricultural high schools, the Governor said he vetoed it "for the reason that I do not believe in the policy that makes it possible for an institution, receiving $5,000 in aid from the state of North Dakota, to make tuition charges of approximately $100 per pupil, against other counties, the taxpayers of which are helping to pay the state aid already received and who also support an agricultural college to which such students may go.

"I think it proper that these schools should be permitted to charge tuition but I do not feel that they should be granted the power to tax these tuition fees against any county without the consent of the county commissioners, or by a vote of the people of such county.

"If fifty pupils were to enter the school at Maddock, for instance, from Eddy county, the school at Maddock could collect $5,000 from Eddy county, even though neither the county commissioners nor the citizens of Eddy county had agreed thereto, and in spite of the fact that the taxpayers of Eddy county are now contributing a part of the aid already received and are also helping to support an agricultural college at Fargo.

In vetoing S. B. 325, which re-voted to some extent the public accountants' laws, the executive said that he did not approve the measure "for the reason that the said act is so loosely drawn and some of the provisions thereof are so indefinite that neither the public nor the accountant who might be charged thereunder, have their rights properly safeguarded."

The executive vetoed H. B. 166, providing that cause for action in case of injury should survive the death of the injured, if the death occurred from another cause, because "it does not appear to be a wise and proper one and in the interest of good public policy."

The only vetoes by the Governor in addition to the four above-named bills were one with reference to appraisal of property on which bonds are issued and one with reference to "baby bonds," which was a duplication.

APPROVES COURSE

Fargo, Mar. 13.—Pruning of the appropriation for the North Dakota Agricultural college to the extent of nearly $44,000 by Gov. Nestos looked upon optimistically by Dr. Lee Coulter.

clerical may well be extended in this case.

Mr. Bangs said he had listened to the president of the bank talk about the money Jones had performed his duties, that the people about the city had a fine feeling toward the defendant and that being a young man that "may yet be a source of pride to those who have counted him a friend."

The mistake, he said, was being rectified to the best of Jones' ability.

Method of Embezzlement.

Mr. Troop, called upon by Judge Miller to explain the transactions, said that "the transactions were essentially those of concealment."

He explained that remittances were sent in from other banks, that it was Jones' duty to write drafts for them. The matter of the embezzlement, he said, might be illustrated by a deposit.

A man would bring a check of $500 to a bank, he said. The receiving teller would take the check, run it through, take the $500 out and put it in his pocket. The deposit would not be credited until next day. Perhaps another item would be used in crediting it, and the difference retained. This could go on and on. The shortage would not show up until the teller was relieved for a period of time.

He said that the shortage of Jones was small amounts from time to time until in September the shortage piled up about $5,000 in five days.

P. C. Remington, president of the bank, said that "I can only repeat what the other gentlemen have said."

He said that Jones was regarded as a first class clerk and that "I liked him."

He said Jones came to the bank, wanted a position, said he was willing to start at the bottom. In five years, he said, Jones was pushed right along until he was made first assistant cashier.

Asked by the court if there was any doubt as to whether Jones took the money Mr. Remington said there was none.

"There was no way in which anyone else could have taken it," he said. "He was chief clerk. Everybody in the bank balanced their books to him. No other person could have a shortage."

The court called the district attorney for a conference, and then asked to see the statute covering the case.

COURT'S SENTENCE

Jones was brought before the court this afternoon for sentence.

mitigating circumstances as could be."

Jones, he said, was a young man, in good health, not needing funds, with an employer who it appeared was a friend as well.

"With no one to clothe but yourself, with no mouths to feed but your own, you deliberately embezzled funds of the bank," said the court.

The court said that if organized society is to stand, the bars must not be broken down. If they were the whole system of public trust would break down, he said.

and the membership of the house to about seventy.

For these reasons, I withhold my approval.

Very respectfully,
R. A. NESTOS, Governor.

Tuition Charge Vetoed

In vetoing H. B. 226, regarding tuition for county agricultural high schools, the Governor said he vetoed it "for the reason that I do not believe in the policy that makes it possible for an institution, receiving $5,000 in aid from the state of North Dakota, to make tuition charges of approximately $100 per pupil, against other counties, the taxpayers of which are helping to pay the state aid already received and who also support an agricultural college to which such students may go."

"I think it proper that these schools should be permitted to charge tuition but I do not feel that they should be granted the power to tax these tuition fees against any county without the consent of the county commissioners, or by a vote of the people of such county."

"If fifty pupils were to enter the school at Maddock, for instance, from Eddy county, the school at Maddock could collect $5,000 from Eddy county, even though neither the county commissioners nor the citizens of Eddy county had agreed thereto, and in spite of the fact that the taxpayers of Eddy county are now contributing a part of the aid already received and are also helping to support an agricultural college at Fargo."

In vetoing S. B. 325, which revised to some extent the public accountants' laws, the executive said that he did not approve the measure "for the reason that the said act is so loosely drawn and some of the provisions thereof are so indefinite that neither the public nor the accountant who might be charged thereunder, have their rights properly safeguarded."

The executive vetoed H. B. 168, providing that cause for action in case of injury should survive the death of the injured, if the death occurred from another cause, because "it does not appear to be a wise and proper one and in the interest of good public policy."

The only votes by the Governor in addition to the four above-named bills were one with reference to appraisal of property on which bonds are issued and one with reference to "baby bonds" which was a duplication.

clemency may well be extended in this case."

Mr. Bangs said he had listened to the president of the bank talk about the way Jones had performed his duties, that the people about the city had a fine feeling toward the defendant and that being a young man that "he may yet be a source of pride to those who have counted him a friend."

Method of Embezzlement.
Mr. Troop, called upon by Judge Miller to explain the transactions, said that "the transactions were essentially those of concealment."

QUIT TOBACCO

So Easy to Drop Cigarette, Cigar, or Chewing Habit

No-To-Bac has helped thousands to break the costly, nerve-shattering habit. Whenever you have a longing for a smoke or chew, just place a harmless No-To-Bac tablet in your mouth instead. All desire stops, shortly the habit is completely broken, and you are better off mentally, physically, financially. It's so easy, so simple. Get a box of No-To-Bac and if it doesn't release you from all craving for tobacco in any form, your druggist will refund your money without question. Adv were sent in from other banks, that it was Jones' duty to write drafts for them. The matter of the embezzlement, he said, might be illustrated by a deposit.

A man would bring a check of $500 to a bank, he said. The receiving teller would take the check, run it through, take the $500 out and put it in his pocket. The deposit would not be credited until next day. Perhaps another item would be used in crediting it, and the difference retained. This could go on and on. The shortage would not show up until the teller was relieved for a period of time.

He said that the shortage of Jones was small amounts from time to time until in September the shortage piled up about $8,000 in five days.

P. C. Remington, president of the bank, said that "I can only repeat what the other gentlemen have said."

He said that Jones was regarded as a first class clerk and that "I liked him." He said Jones came to the bank, wanted a position, said he was willing to start at the bottom. In five years, he said, Jones was pushed right along until he was made first assistant cashier.

Asked by the court if there was any doubt as to whether Jones took the money Mr. Remington said there was none.

"There was no way in which anyone else could have taken it," he said. "He was chief clerk. Everybody in the bank balanced their books to him. No other person could have a shortage."

The court called the district attorney for a conference, and then asked to see the statute covering the case.

COURT'S SENTENCE
Jones was brought before the court this afternoon for sentence.

"The court, since you have pleaded guilty, does not ask you to make any statement in this manner but if you desire to make a statement the court will hear you," said Judge Miller. "If you desire to say anything which would bear off the degree of sentence that the court ought to know, you will be heard. If there were any other persons connected with this crime, the court will hear you."

"I have nothing to say," Jones replied.

The court proceeded, stating he had listened to pleas of clemency by various persons and that "it goes without saying that one of the unpleasant duties of the court to sentence persons."

Stating that in many cases there are mitigating sentences which argue for a light sentence, Judge Miller said that "in your case there seems to be as much absence of mitigating circumstances as could be."

"With no one to clothe but yourself, with no moutas to feed but your own, you deliberately embezzled funds of the bank," said the court.

The court said that if organized society is to stand, the bars must not be broken down. If they were the whole system of public trust would break down, he said.

ASSEMBLY WORK GOES ON

Employees Busy Cleaning Up Final Business of Body

End of the legislative session does not mean the cessation of work for all legislative employees. The business of closing up the session's record still is in progress.

Four session employees—two from the house and two from the senate still are engaged in correcting and indexing the journal of the session, preparatory to its being printed in permanent form. They probably will be on the job for two weeks more. The mailing force is still engaged in mailing out the journals of the last few days of the session, and expect to complete their work by the middle of this week. Mailing of the last day's journal began Saturday, and there are 3,000 copies to go out.

The secretary of state's office has the job of recording and of the laws after the governor has exercised his right to approve or veto a bill. Mimeographed copies of emergency measures, which become effective upon signature by the governor, are being distributed to various officials in the state. The popular edition of the session laws will be printed soon, so that the courts, lawyers and others will be able to act accordingly.

NEW TRAIL TO BE ASKED SOON FOR SCHNEIDER

States Attorney Says He Will Move Case For an Early Disposition

DEFENDANT STAYS HERE

State's Attorney E. S. Allen today was preparing to go before Judge Ansonius and asked that steps be taken to fix a date for a new trial in the case of Kasimir Schneider, charged with having caused the death of his wife by poison. Schneider was a liberty today under his old bond, following the disagreement of the jury late yesterday afternoon.

The state attorney said he would seek a new trial as soon as possible. Beyond this he declined to comment on the case.

P. D. Norton, counsel for Schneider, in a statement declared that the reported standing of 11 to 1 for conviction by the jury did not represent the actual sentiment of that body. "The vote when they went in was six to six," he said. "During the argument only four of the jury felt they could say beyond a reasonable doubt Schneider was guilty. The merits of the case were argued in the jury room and the jurors gained the impression from what occurred in the jury room and statements in the presence of jurors on the streets of Bismarck that one of the jurors was not a fair and impartial juror but was biased in favor of the defendant. This belief in the bias of one of the jurors caused the other jurors who in the beginning were in favor of acquittal to join forces with and vote with those in favor of the defendant's guilt. This situation left one juror who from the beginning favored acquittal standing alone."

Schneider will continue working in Bismarck, to be near his baby, one year old, now being cared for by a relative, Mr. Norton said. Schneider is working as a day laborer and never was paid the $2,000 life insurance policy carried on his wife, his attorney said.

Maintaining Schneider is innocent Mr. Norton declared that after consulting with the defendant for eight months and investigating the case he felt sure that Schneider was not responsible for his wife's death, though he said he realized the circumstances gave grounds for belief that Schneider did commit the act.

He declared this reputation and whole life history of Schneider argued against the state's contention. He declared that in the annuals of criminology there has never been a case of murder by slow poisoning which was committed by a laboring man of the intelligence and education of Schneider, but when ever committed have been by persons familiar with handling poisons or able to judge the effect of their administration, and such crimes have been committed only by physicians, chemists, druggists, toxicologists, lawyers and ministers.

RAIL MERGER HEARING SET FOR MONDAY

Governor, Chairman Railroad Commission, Others Will Attend It

Commercial clubs in all cities on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads today were notified by Governor Nelson of the hearing to be conducted in St. Paul Monday by Commissioner Hall of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the question of consolidating North-western railroads.

The Governor and Chairman Mitchell of the state railroad commission, also will be present at the hearing. The hearing will take up the plan of the I. C. C. of placing the Great Northern and Milwaukee with smaller lines in one system, together. The Hill interests proposed a consolidation to include the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and C. P. and Q. while Hale Holden of the Burlington, according to information here, has advanced a new plan of consolidating all western roads into four great systems, each to have two trans-continental lines.

The plan of the Interstate Commerce Commission, worked out by Prof. Ripley of Harvard University, is advanced in the interest of the railroads and transportation, and is not mandatory if adopted by the commission, according to members of the railroad commission here.

TREASURER HAS GOOD BALANCE

On Long Side of Ledger By Nearly $400,000

With his financial statement showing $376,439.62 in the credit of the state general fund over liabilities, State Treasurer John Steen is not worrying over the immediate future of North Dakota's finances.

The statement of Mr. Steen, prepared for information of bond buyers, placed liabilities of the state general fund on for the last fiscal year at $5,100,147.30. Assets totalled $5,506,586.92.

The total bonded indebtedness of the state now stands at $11,802,000 with $231,755.31 in the various sinking funds of the state. The largest amount of bonds outstanding is the real estate bonds, totalling $7,100,000. Real bonds outstanding are: Old refunding bonds, $202,000; bank bonds, $2,000,000; mill and elevator bonds, $2,500,000.

WEATHER FORECAST.

For Bismarck and vicinity: Overcast tonight and Wednesday possibly light snow. Colder.

For North Dakota: Overcast tonight and Wednesday; possibly light snow. Colder.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The pressure is low over the Rocky Mountain region and over the lower Great Lakes region and it is high over the Plains States and in the southern Pacific coast states. This distribution of pressure has been accompanied by precipitation from the western Rocky Mountain region to the north Pacific coast, and it is snowing at most of the reporting stations from the Mississippi Valley to the Great Lakes region. Fair cold weather prevails in the western Plains States, eastern Rocky Mountain states and in the Southwest.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

HEADED FOR YOU

Get ready folks, the foxy manufacturers are preparing to spring hundreds of King Tut fad-articles on you. One of the first of these will be the Tut-ankh-Amen cigaret. One of the big tobacco companies is getting ready to market it.

A New York firm has placed a rush order with a pottery factory to turn out hundreds of thousands of "Tut pups," good luck statues like the Billiken. These are supposed to be reproductions of the Egyptian "houn dwag" that followed King Tut around the royal palace.

Goldsmiths and their designers are working night and day on orders for Egyptian jewelry, especially bracelets and anklets.

In Washington the patent office is getting ready for a deluge of applications from manufacturers who want to use Tut's name on their wares, with trade mark protection.

First on the job seems to have been Frederick Martin Burns, eastern promoter. As far back as last Nov. 30 he applied for Tut trade marks in 15 different industries—bathing suits, music, clothing, dolls, umbrellas and so on.

Burns even went after a copyright on Tut's name in the fields of music, poetry and fiction. To sew up the name for fiction purposes, he "wrote all night." At about 3 a. m. he says, "I finished by story, which is 6000 words long. I don't know anything about writing fiction, but I know how to protect myself for my purposes by throwing in plenty of love, mystery and red-blooded material."

Burns' rush was to monopolize Tut's name for fiction purposes. Judging from his description, the magazines will fight to get his masterpiece.

A King Tut novel is being churned out. Monte Carlo and Alma Sanders (authors of "Tangerine") have obtained the use of Tut's name for a show and already have written the music and lyrics.

Vincent Lopez is playing Tut music with his famous Hotel Pennsylvania orchestra, New York. He has sent a rush order to Egypt for copies of the sistrum, ringing and chiming instrument found in Tut's tomb. Watch the jazz bands pick it up.

It's a great age we're living in. Study the impending Tut crazes and you'll learn a lot about infectious emotions, the mob spirit and our instinct of imitation which links us with the monkey.

ARE YOU ALERT?

A magician would find it easier to fool Einstein than to deceive Einstein's eight-year-old son. So claims Arthur Buckley, official of the Society of American Magicians.

It's common knowledge in the show business, that a stage wizard is most nervous when doing his tricks before an audience containing a great many children. The grown-ups are fooled easily. But chances are that the shrill voice of some youngster in the rear of the house will pipe out: "I seen how he done it."

Children are much more alert than their elders. One reason is because they find everything in life new and interesting and are constantly watching for another bit of knowledge. Interest keeps the brain geared up to high, keen pitch.

As we get older, we observe that life is an endless repetition, the same old stuff over and over with only an occasional surprise. Naturally, we fall into the habit of not looking for something new. In turn, this gradually dulls our perceptions, slows down our ability to observe quickly. So the stage magician finds it easy to hoax us.

Magician Buckley, as quoted, conveys the idea that, the wiser a man is, the easier to fool him. For instance, a very simple trick will baffle a profound brain, while a man of only average intelligence is apt to "catch on."

The psychology of this is that one of the characteristics of deep thinking is a tendency to concentrate entirely on important subjects. Which explains why a person with a brilliant intellect often is unable to master card games, trivialities which the deep thinker subconsciously is adverse to concentrating on.

The "heavy thinker," apparently interested in the stage magician and trying to solve the trick, has about 95 per cent of his brain power far away, browsing unconsciously on important matters. The man of lesser intelligence is not in a semi-trance or hypnotic state of interest in important matters, so he is able to rally his concentration 100 per cent on the magician's tricks.

This delve into psychology raises the interesting suggestion that alertness is not necessarily a sign of brain power. On the other hand, it may indicate intelligence only average, or below.

The absent-minded professor is the subject of many jokes. He, deeply concentrated on things that really count, is far from alert. Often he has to have questions repeated two or three times before he "gets" them. But bring up one of the important subjects that really interest him, and you find him as alert as a hair-trigger.

It's a queer machine, that gray brain inside our skulls.

ACTORS

John Drew celebrates, rounding out his 50th year on the American stage. Like J. Walker, he's "still going strong." Drew comes from one of the oldest theatrical families in the world.

Theater-goers with long memories compare the stage of today with 25 or more years ago, and find the same old stars shining over the footlights. What'll we do for leaders when these old-timers pass on? Is there a dearth of theatrical genius? Or is genius drawn to the movies instead of the stage?

Some of these modern "stars" couldn't have carried a spear when John Drew was in his twenties.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are printed here in order that our readers may have both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.

UNITING THE FACTIONS

There appears to be two factions in the Democratic party of North Dakota. This is not as it should be. The party should lay down its platform and principles and those who stand by these are Democrats and those who do not stand by them are something else.

A party without fundamental principles is dead and no party can be perpetuated by office seekers and office holders. The office is incidental and should go only to the men best fitted to carry out the policies of the party.

The State Democrat wants to see in North Dakota a platform upon which any 100 per cent American need not be ashamed to stand—a platform of the fundamental principles of government which would read somewhat like this:

"The Democratic party of North Dakota affirms its allegiance to the constitution of the United States and holds the spirit of that instrument to a free government."

"We insist under the Constitution on equal rights for all and special privileges for none, and denounce a protective tariff that taxes one class of men for the benefit of another as a form of robbery—a method of taking property from the individual without recompense—something never contemplated by the founders of our government."

"The Democratic party of North Dakota demands that the Federal Reserve banking system be administered for the benefit of the people as intended by the party that passed the bill creating the same in congress and not by the agents of special privilege who have used the system to rob the common people of the company by huge and unauthorized withdrawals of currency from circulation and enormous curtailments of credit."

"We stand for a foreign policy that will give the United States its proper place in the affairs of the world and believe that this nation should live up to its great principles which under God, have been extended to it for the advancement of humanity."

"We insist that the justices of the Supreme court be appointed from the patriotic, 100 per cent Americans of our country who have the welfare of the people at heart and not from the men whose life and trining have made them the tools of special interests."

"We insist that the powers of the supreme court of the United States be definitely laid down by constitutional amendment of necessary—that there may be an end of indirect legislation by the judiciary."

The Republican party has ever been a party of special privileges and as such a cancerous growth on the body politic never contemplated by the founders of our government. A national policy along the lines indicated above would cure every ill to which we are subjected in North Dakota—all our ills are caused by special privilege.

North Dakota is a rich pasture for the special interests of the east. Here live the ultimate consumers—the men and women on whom falls the tariff burden.

This is the state that can build railroads cheaper, operate them cheaper, haul longer trains than can be hauled in other states, maintain the roads cheaper—and which notwithstanding these natural advantages, pays twice the rates for service.

This is the state that has suffered severely by the withdrawal of currency from circulation and the curtailment of credits by the Federal reserve bank and whose products have been cheapened to an extent that bankrupts the producer by the lack of a foreign policy.

The State Democrat believes that a platform similar to this, stating the facts as we see them here in North Dakota, should be adopted by the Democrats and those standing on the platform as set forth by a majority of the party of the State are Democrats and those not standing by the same are not—State Democrat, Fargo.

Everybody thinks the other man's job is pretty easy. It's hard to realize the difficulties and hard work involved in a task that's different from your own.

The old farmer in the story was an example. The doctor had visited his house and one of his neighbors came over to inquire the reason.

"My wife is sick," explained the farmer. "Don't know just what's the matter. She got up this mornin' and got breakfast for me and the hands, and then she done a washin' and baked some pies and bread—maybe ten loaves or so—and then she churned and cleaned up the house a little and fed the pigs and chickens and weeded some of the garden and got dinner and was sewin' and mendin' some this afternoon like she always does, when all of a sudden she keeled over."

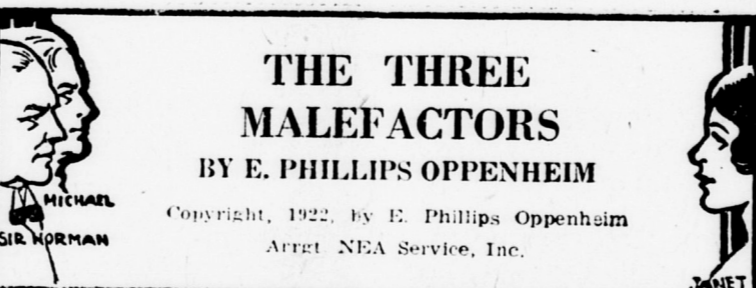

"I can't think what's the matter, for she's been doin' housework I've that without no trouble for nigh onto fifteen years."

MALEFACTORS

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Copyright, 1922, by E. Phillips Oppenheim
Arranged by NEA Service, Inc.

Vendetta begins between MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and SIR NORMAN GREYES, once of Scotland Yard, after Sayers' beautiful housemaid JANET saves him from Sir Norman by shooting dead the officer sent to arrest him. Janet becomes Sayers' wife and accomplice. In many exploits, Michael escapes arrest by taking desperate chances. Janet is an able assistant, but because he greatly admires the many good qualities he recognizes in her, Sir Norman deals with her as leniently as possible.

In the Leeds bank robbery Michael (known to Greys as "Stanfield") barely escapes and has to flee the country.

A plot of Michael and another criminal, Paul Gont, to ruin the political leader, Philippe Lutard, is frustrated by Sir Norman. JANET'S VERSION

I had been four months after Trumperton-Smith, that I decided to rob her. I first went to her house, day by day, I felt the need of money for those luxuries to which I had become accustomed. After my disastrous visit to Paris, no news whatever had come to me from my husband. I slack period had set in at the dressmaking establishment where I had been employed, and I was informed that my services were no longer necessary. I spent a month at a manicurist's and a few weeks at a photographic studio.

My husband's Smith advertisement in the Morning Post for a companion and lady's maid, I won the post on account of my manners and appearance. My mistress was a lady of ample person and ample means. She lived in excellent style and apparently had plenty of money. She was a widow about 45 years old, still goodlooking in a florid sort of way, and well enough educated from the middle-class point of view. Men were her one and everlasting hobby.

We were staying at the Magnificent Hotel at Brighton when the idea which I have mentioned, of robbing my mistress, first took definite shape in my mind. I should have bided my time, I think, but for two reasons. One was that the salary which she paid me was absurdly small and I saw no chance of saving anything, and the other was the very imminent fear of being anticipated. Mrs. Trumperton-Smith was not always as discreet as she should have been in her acquaintances.

At the present time she was on exceedingly friendly terms with Mr. Sidney Bloor, whom I put down, from the moment I first saw him, as an undoubted adventurer. He was always dressed in the height of fashion, and he had acquired the shibboleth of the up-to-date young man of the moment. He made languid attempts to kiss me, whenever I found him alone.

I found me one evening, some four months after our arrival in Brighton, alone in the sitting-room at about the hour when Madam was sometimes pleased to dispense cocktails. A spasmodic attempt at gallantry having been met and repulsed, he lingered to watch me busy repairing a hair-ornament which my mistress desired to wear that evening.

"Where is the old bird?" he asked confidentially.

"Madam is out playing bridge with some friends," I told him.

"What little gewgaws are you sending her down in tonight?"

"Whatever she chooses to wear," I replied.

Smith at all, it had better be done quickly. The drinking of cocktails was concluded a little more quickly than usual, and Mrs. Trumperton-Smith joined me in the bedroom, full of what passed with her as to the quality, however, which was entirely superficial, and in a general way I found her disagreeable, selfish and jealous to a degree.

She withdrew the key of her jewel-case from a bracelet and passed it to me.

I selected the diamond necklace, earrings and bracelet, locked up the case and returned the key. My mistress' expression softened as she looked at herself in the glass.

She picked up her gold bag, looked inside to see that I had placed her handkerchief there, and turned away.

"See that the fire is kept up in the sitting-room, Janet," she ordered. "Mr. Bloor and I will take our coffee there."

I went into the steward's room and had my supper as usual, and I also paid a visit to Mr. Bloor's bedroom and borrowed certain trifles which I proposed to use later on. I happened to know that both he and Mrs. Trumperton-Smith were engaged to play bridge after dinner at a neighboring hotel.

I contrived to leave open the connecting door between the bedroom and the sitting-room, and to be in the former when they returned for their coffee. Madam came in for her cloak, and they were on the point of starting out again, when her escort at last gave me the cue for which I had been waiting.

"I say, Mimi," he drawled—he weighed fourteen stone—"I don't feel comfortable walking along the front with you in those diamonds. Leave them behind, there's a dear."

"Just as you like, dear," she said.

sented meekly. "Perhaps you're right, especially if we go on to supper afterward. Here, Janet!"

"Yes, madam?"

"Take these off—all of them," she directed, extending her arms and pointing her neck. "I'm going out and may be late."

I relieved her of the jewels. All the time Mr. Bloor was watching with a gleam in his eyes.

"If you will give me your key, madam, I will lock them up," I suggested.

"Oh, that will do when I get back," she said. "Put them in one of the drawers, Janet."

They went off together. I did exactly as I had been bidden, and afterward I lingered in the sitting-room while I completed my plans.

I had just come to a decision when there was a sharp knock at the door. The manager of the hotel—a Mr. Leon Grant—made his appearance. He looked around the empty sitting-room.

"I understood that Mrs. Trumperton-Smith was up here," he said courteously.

"Mrs. Trumperton-Smith went out some little time ago," I told him.

"What time do you expect your mistress back?" he inquired.

"She did not say, sir," I replied. "The last time she went out to play bridge, it was about one o'clock when she returned. Mr. Bloor is with her."

The manager nodded and turned away.

"Can I give her any message, sir?" I added.

He hesitated, closed the door and came back again.

"I should imagine," he said, looking at me attentively, "that you are a trusted servant."

"I was engaged as companion-lady's maid, sir," I told him. "I believe that my mistress has every confidence in me."

He nodded.

"To tell you the truth," he explained, "I am a little worried about your mistress' jewels. There was a small robbery last night at a hotel in the neighborhood, and I have had an indirect sort of warning from the police that there are thieves about. Mrs. Trumperton-Smith has the reputation of being very careless."

"It is scarcely fair upon any hotel," the manager pointed out a little querulously. "Will you be so kind as to tell me where she keeps them?"

I showed him the case, although I said nothing of the diamonds in the drawer. He frowned severely.

"It is placing temptation in people's way," he declared.

"The door of the bedroom is always locked," I reminded him, "and you have a night-watchman. Then, too, we are on the fourth story."

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

The fountain on top of Nancy's head kept running and running. Mix-Up Land kept tilting up and filling up with water, and Jack Straw, the rogue, became more and more frightened as he saw every thing swimming or climbing while he couldn't do either—on account of having a peg leg.

He would have turned the magic ring on his left arm and stopped the water, but he couldn't tell where it was coming from—whether a big wave from the ocean had washed over the land, or a cloud had burst, or a river had backed up, or what.

First the grass disappeared, then the flowers, and the bushes. Everything that could swim was swimming and everything that could climb was climbing, everyone who had a boat to row in was rowing, and everyone who had a raft to float on was floating on it.

"Mix-Up Land is a queer place to do something and that soon," declared Jack. "I wish I knew where all the water was coming from."

Nancy and Nick had long ago been covered up with water. It had gone right over the tops of their heads. But Nick was male and Nancy was female (they changed by magic) and so they didn't feel a thing.

Finally Jack Straw had only the tip of his nose sticking out of the water. "I do believe I'll have to turn my ring and change Mix-Up Land back into Apple-Pie Land!" he said and sighed a weary sigh. But something better still happened. The ring slid off his hand into the water and it was never found again.

Before you could say "scat" everything was set to rights. The water disappeared and there were the mountains and trees and grass and houses and pigs and chickens and cows and churches and people and wagons and everything just as it should be. Mix-Up Land was Apple-Pie Land again and King Even-Steven was on the throne in his palace.

And Jack Straw was back on his feet, his shoes were back on his feet, and best of all, the Twins were little boy and girl again, and on their way home.

AN INTIMATE STORY OF INNERMOST EMOTIONS REVEALED IN PRIVATE LETTERS

COPYRIGHT 1923 - NEA SERVICE INC.

Letter From John Alden Prescott To His Fiancee, Leslie Hamilton

MY DEAR GIRL:

Have you by any chance met a Priscilla Bradford lately? She is the daughter of a very dear friend of my mother and she is visiting a distant relative of mine by the name of Mary Alden in your town. I have never met Mrs. Alden and to tell you the truth, I could get along very well if I had never met Priscilla Bradford. My mother, however, is very fond of her. She is long on coming over in the Mayflower and all such lot, and Priscilla claims direct descent from Governor Bradford.

Personally, I don't care whether my ancestors emigrated in the Mayflower or the Kaiser Wilhelm. It seems to me to be the silliest thing imaginable to keep harping on your ancestors.

Anyway, Priscilla has certainly spoiled the beans. You see, darling, I had neglected to write to mother to tell her that you had made me the happiest man on earth. Mother is kind of fussy, you know; and I was quite aware that she had picked out Priscilla for me, and I hope you won't think I'm conceited when I tell you that I also knew Priscilla was willing. I was a coward, I guess, and I put off writing to her from day to day. Of course, I never dreamed that Fate could play me such a joke as to plant that meddling Priscilla Bradford in your town just when the society editors are hounding you to death and every time you turn around some reporter is going to make copy of it.

You can imagine my mother's horror when she got a newspaper clipping telling all about your buying some elaborate nightdress for your trousseau—for you must know she has no idea of modern yellow journalism.

You must confess, dear girl, that it was putting it on a bit thick for people with old-fashioned ideas, when such intimate details of wedding trousseaus are made public.

If by any possibility you should see Priscilla, perhaps it would be a good thing for you to be nice to her; of course, you will have to invite her to the wedding. Mother will probably insist upon Priscilla staying with her at the hotel when she is there.

I am counting the days, sweetheart, and surely it is a long, long way to Tippetary, and the sweetest girl I know. I expect perhaps that you should write to mother. What are the ethics of Mrs. Grundy on this subject? I'm sure I don't know.

Poor mother, I'm her only son you know, and I guess I haven't lived up to what her son whose ancestors came over in the Mayflower should. Good night, dear girl. I should. Good night, dear girl. I should. Good night, dear girl. I should. Good night, dear girl. I should.

I closed my eyes I prayed to do so? Again, good night my own girl.

JACK.

Letter From Leslie Hamilton to John Alden Prescott

DEAR JOHN:

I have not by any chance met Priscilla Bradford, and to tell you the truth I hope I will not—eat! I do know slightly your distant relative, Mary Alden.

—Miss Alden belongs to that class of society whose greatest pleasure is entertaining the welfare of the globe. Once in a great while she comes to one of the parties given by some of the older set, and she sits alongside of the wall with her mouth pursed up as though she thoroughly disapproved of all of us.

As for dancing, she would not think of it. I think she is engaged to the assistant preacher at the First M. E. Church. She will make him a good wife.

I am quite sure that your Priscilla Bradford is a cat, and I think it is very horrid of her to send all that stuff to your mother. You can, of course, see that she wants your mother to dislike me.

I did not put it in the paper that I had purchased a nightdress like the one worn by Princess Olga of Rumania, but some enterprising reporter got it somewhere, and of course you can understand that it was spread on the society page immediately.

I wonder if you will forgive me, my dear John, if I tell you that I think your mother must not have a very nice mind. She seems to be one of those persons who is always finding fault because the modern girl does not wear any undereclothes to speak of, and then makes a great fuss if by some possibility someone happens to speak of them. They seem to be things that are very necessary to be worn, but no one should think of speaking of them. To my mind it is a very silly idea.

Oh, John, I know I am being nasty, but you never did love that Priscilla Bradford, did you? And you would never let your mother or anyone else think that I wasn't nice, would you, just because I cannot endure that hypocritical modesty which to me is more vulgar than honest frankness?

I am just heartbroken over this affair, for I wanted your mother to love me. I wanted her to think that I was going to be good wife to you. You know I will, don't you, John?

The spots on this paper are tears and for once I am glad you are not here, for I am not pretty when I cry. But either smiling or weeping, I am always your loving, LESLIE.

Sugar Monopoly

It is freely stated that speculators have a corner on sugar and that they have stored away in some hiding place, or places, a million tons or more.

Speculators may be able to manipulate sugar prices, but we may feel positively assured that no combination or group of men have the power or are in position to monopolize or control the prices of men's clothing or any branch of men's or boys' wearing apparel. Competition is so keen among manufacturers that prices are held down, in many instances, lower than the price on the raw material justifies.

Spring shipments are now being received and you are cordially invited to come in and examine the new goods and learn our prices. Our years of experience and cash buying facilities, direct from mill and factory, enable us to under-sell at all times.

Write to us for prices and descriptions of such goods as you may be interested in or send us your mail orders which will receive careful attention.

Put Your Money to Work

The bank is a reservoir for the funds of a community. Some people have funds which are idle, others are in need of funds. Through the medium of the bank these two classes are brought together. Those requiring and deserving credit may secure it, and those who desire income from capital already accumulated may obtain it in the form of interest.

The bank thus carries the load between processes. It finances the farmer from seedtime to harvest and the merchant who needs funds for the purchase of goods—both liquidating their loans and when the crop or the merchandise has been sold.

By depositing your money in the bank not only are benefits secured for yourself, but you are promoting the economic life of your community. Our certificates of deposit and savings pass books are sound investments on which we pay as high a rate of interest as is consistent with safety of principal.

TO APPEAR HERE

May Robson.

Howard McKent Barnes has written a new thrilling comedy entitled "Mother's Millions" in which May Robson is starring under the proficient management of Augustus Pitou, Inc., and on March 19 at the auditorium. Miss Robson will bow to a house full of friends who will see her give a perfect personification of a woman financier whom the whole world turns to for advice.

"Harriet Breen," the character Miss Robson plays is a rather peculiar person in her home life, and even her children and the one old maid servant are not really at ease with her, she has a way of intimidating every one but her "mark" is worse than her bite, and her deep love is only covered by a coating of good judgment.

MY DEAR GIRL:
Have you by any chance met a Priscilla Bradford lately? She is the daughter of a very dear friend of my mother and she is visiting a distant relative of mine by the name of Mary Alden in your town. I have never met Miss Alden and to tell you the truth, I could get along very well if I had never met Priscilla Bradford. My mother, however, is very fond of her. She is long on coming over in the Mayflower and all such rot, and Priscilla claims direct descent from Governor Bradford.

Personally, I don't care whether my ancestors emigrated in the Mayflower or the Kaiser Wilhelm. It seems to me to be the silliest thing imaginable to keep harping on your ancestors.

Anyway, Priscilla has certainly spilled the beans. You see, darling, I had neglected to write to mother to tell her that you had made me the happiest man on earth. Mother is kind of fussy, you know; and I was quite aware that she had picked out Priscilla for me, and I hope you won't think I'm conceited when I tell you that I also knew Priscilla was willing. I was a coward, I guess, and I put off writing to her from day to day. Of course, I never dreamed that Fate could play me such a joke as to plant that meddling Priscilla Bradford in your town just when you once and every night when I closed my eyes I prayed to do so? Again, good night my own girl.

You can imagine my mother's horror when she got a newspaper clipping telling all about your buying some elaborate nightdress for your trousseau—for you must know she has no idea of modern yellow journalism. You must confess, dear girl, that it was putting it on a bit thick for people with old-fashioned ideas, when such intimate details of wedding trousseaus are made public. If by any possibility you should see Priscilla, perhaps it would be a good thing for you to be nice to her; of course, you will have to mouth pursed up as though she thoroughly disapproved of all of us.

As for dancing, she would not think of it. I think she is engaged to the assistant preacher at the First M. E. Church. She will make him a good wife.

I am quite sure that your Priscilla Bradford is a cat, and I think it is very horrid of her to send all that stuff to your mother. You can, of course, see that she wants your mother to dislike me.

I did not put it in the paper that I had purchased a nightdress like the one worn by Princess Olga of Rumania, but some enterprising reporter got it somewhere, and of course you can understand that it was spread on the society page immediately.

I wonder if you will forgive me, my dear John, if I tell you that I think your mother must not have a very nice mind. She seems to be one of those persons who is always finding fault because the no-

the truth I hope I will not—cat! I do know slightly your distant relative, Mary Alden.

Miss Alden belongs to that class of society whose greatest pleasure is entertaining the Welfare League. Once in a great while she comes to one of the parties given by some of the elder set, and she sits alongside of the wall with her mouth pursed up as though she thoroughly disapproved of all of us.

As for dancing, she would not think of it. I think she is engaged to the assistant preacher at the First M. E. Church. She will make him a good wife.

I am quite sure that your Priscilla Bradford is a cat, and I think it is very horrid of her to send all that stuff to your mother. You can, of course, see that she wants your mother to dislike me.

I did not put it in the paper that I had purchased a nightdress like the one worn by Princess Olga of Rumania, but some enterprising reporter got it somewhere, and of course you can understand that it was spread on the society page immediately.

I wonder if you will forgive me, my dear John, if I tell you that I think your mother must not have a very nice mind. She seems to be one of those persons who is always finding fault because the no-dem girl does not wear any underclothes to speak of, and then makes a great fuss if by some possibility someone happens to speak of them. They seem to be things that are very necessary to be worn, but no one should think of speaking of them. To my mind it is a very silly idea.

Oh, John, I know I am being nasty, but you never did love that Priscilla Bradford, did you? And you would never let your mother or anyone else think that I wasn't nice, would you, just because I cannot endure that hypocritical modesty which to me is more vulgar than honest frankness? I am just heartbroken over this affair, for I wanted your mother to love me. I wanted her to think that I was going to be good wife to you. You know I will, don't you, John?

The spots on this paper are tears and for once I am glad you are not here, for I am not pretty when I cry. But either smiling or weeping, I am always your loving, LESLIE.

Sugar Monopoly

It is freely stated that speculators have a corner on sugar and that they have stored away in some hiding place, or places, a million tons or more.

Speculators may be able to manipulate sugar prices, but we may feel positively assured that no combination or group of men have the power or are in position to monopolize or control the prices of men's clothing or any branch of men's or boys' wearing apparel. Competition is so keen among manufacturers that prices are held down, in many instances, lower than the price on the raw material justifies.

Spring shipments are now being received and you are cordially invited to come in and examine the new goods and learn our prices. Our years of experience and cash buying facilities, direct from mill and factory, enable us to under-sell at all times.

Write to us for prices and descriptions of such goods as you may be interested in or send us your mail orders which will receive careful attention.

The bank is a reservoir for the funds of a community. Some people have funds which are idle, others are in need of funds. Through the medium of the bank these two classes are brought together. Those requiring and deserving credit may secure it, and those who desire income from capital already accumulated may obtain it in the form of interest.

The bank thus carries the load between processes. It finances the farmer from seedtime to harvest and the merchant who needs funds for the purchase of goods—both liquidating their loans and when the crop or the merchandise has been sold.

By depositing your money in the bank not only are benefits secured for yourself, but you are promoting the economic welfare of your community. Our certificates of deposit and savings pass books are sound investments on which we pay as high a rate of interest as is consistent with safety of principal.

HEADED FOR YOU
Get ready folks, the foxy manufacturers are preparing spring hundreds of King Tut fad-articles on you. One of the first of these will be the Tut-ankh-Amen cigaret. One of the big tobacco companies is getting ready to market it. A New York firm has placed a rush order with a pottery factory to turn out hundreds of thousands of "Tut pups," good luck statues like the Billiken. These are supposed to be reproductions of the Egyptian "houn" dwag that followed King Tut around the royal palace.
Goldsmiths and their designers are working night and day on orders for Egyptian jewelry, especially bracelets and anklets.
In Washington the patent office is getting ready for a deluge of applications from manufacturers who want to use Tut's name on their wares, with trade mark protection.
First on the job seems to have been Frederick Martin Burns, eastern promoter. As far back as last Nov. 30 he applied for Tut trade marks in 15 different industries—bathing suits, music, clothing, dolls, umbrellas and so on.
Burns even went after a copyright on Tut's name in the fields of music, poetry and fiction. To sew up the name for fiction purposes, he "wrote all night." At about 3 a. m. he says, "I finished by story, which is 6000 words long. I don't know anything about writing fiction, but I know how to protect myself for my purposes by throwing in plenty of love, mystery and red-blooded material."
Burns' hunch was to monopolize Tut's name for fiction purposes. Judging from his description, the magazines will fight to get his masterpiece.
A King Tut novel is being churned out. Monte Carlo and Alma Sanders (authors of "Tangerine") have obtained the use of Tut's name for a show and already have written the music and lyrics.
Vincent Lopez is playing Tut music with his famous Hotel Pennsylvania orchestra, New York. He has sent a rush order to Egypt for copies of the sistrum, ringing and chiming instrument found in Tut's tomb. Watch the jazz bands pick it up.
It's a great age we're living in. Study the impending Tut crazes and you'll learn a lot about infectious emotions, the mob spirit and our instinct of imitation which links us with the monkey.

ARE YOU ALERT?
A magician would find it easier to fool Einstein than to deceive Einstein's eight-year-old son. So claims Arthur Buckley, official of the Society of American Magicians.
It's common knowledge in the show business, that a stage wizard is most nervous when doing his tricks before an audience containing a great many children. The grown-ups are fooled easily. But chances are that the shrill voice of some youngster in the rear of the house will pipe out: "I seen how he done it."
Children are much more alert than their elders. One reason is because they find everything in life new and interesting and are constantly watching for another bit of knowledge. Interest keeps the brain geared up to high, keen pitch.
As we get older, we observe that life is an endless repetition, the same old stuff over and over with only an occasional surprise. Naturally, we fall into the habit of not looking for something new. In turn, this gradually dulls our perceptions, slows down our ability to observe quickly. So the stage magician finds it easy to hoax us.
Magician Buckley, as quoted, conveys the idea that, the wiser a man is, the easier to fool him. For instance, a very simple trick will baffle a profound brain, while a man of only average intelligence is apt to "catch on."
The psychology of this is that one of the characteristics of deep thinking is a tendency to concentrate entirely on important subjects. Which explains why a person with a brilliant intellect often is unable to master card games, trivialities which the deep thinker subconsciously is adverse to concentrating on.
The "heavy thinker," apparently interested in the stage magician and trying to solve the trick, has about 95 per cent of his brain power far away, browsing unconsciously on important matters. The man of lesser intelligence is not in a semi-trance or hypnotic state of interest in important matters, so he is able to rally his concentration 100 per cent on the magician's tricks.
This delve into psychology raises the interesting suggestion that alertness is not necessarily a sign of brain power. On the other hand, it may indicate intelligence only average, or below.
The absent-minded professor is the subject of many jokes. He, deeply concentrated on things that really count, is far from alert. Often he has to have questions repeated two or three times before he "gets" them. But bring up one of the important subjects that really interest him, and you find him as alert as a hair-trigger.
It's a queer machine, that gray brain inside our skulls.

ACTORS
John Drew celebrates, rounding out his 50th year on the American stage. Like J. Walker, he's "still going strong." Drew comes from one of the oldest theatrical families in the world.
Theater-goers with long memories compare the stage of today with 25 or more years ago, and find the same old stars shining over the footlights. What'll we do for leaders when these old-timers pass on? Is there a dearth of theatrical genius? Or is genius drawn to the movies instead of the stage?
Some of these modern "stars" couldn't have carried a spear when John Drew was in his twenties.

Vendetta begins between MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and SIR NORMAN GREYES, one of Scotland Yard, after Sayers' beautiful housemaid JANET shoots him from Sir Norman by snatching dead the officer sent to arrest him. Janet becomes Sayers' wife and accomplice. In many exploits, Michael escapes arrest by taking advantage of his position as a housemaid, but because he greatly admires the many good qualities he recognizes in her, Sir Norman deals with her as leniently as possible.
In the Leeds bank robbery Michael (known to Greyes as "Stanfield"), barely escapes and has to flee the country.
JANET'S VIKING
It was about four months after I had been in the service of Mrs. Trumperton-Smith, that I decided to rob her. I first went to her house, day by day, I felt the need of money for those luxuries to which I had become accustomed. After my disastrous visit to Paris, no news whatever had come to me from my husband. A slack period had set in at the dressmaking establishment where I had been employed, and I was informed that my services were no longer necessary. I spent a month at a manicurist's and a few weeks at a photographic studio.
Mrs. Trumperton-Smith advertised in the Morning Post for a companion and lady's maid. I won the post on account of my manners and appearance. My mistress was a lady of ample person and ample means. She lived in excellent style and apparently had plenty of money. She was a good looking 35 years old, still good looking in a florid sort of way, and well enough educated from the middle-class point of view. Men were her one and everlasting hobby.
We were staying at the magnificent Hotel at Brighton when the idea which I have mentioned, of robbing my mistress, first took definite shape in my mind. I should have bided my time, I think, but for two reasons. One was that the salary which she paid me was absurdly small and I saw no chance of saving anything, and the other was the very imminent fear of being anticipated. Mrs. Trumperton-Smith was not always as discreet as she should have been in her acquaintances.
At the present time she was on exceedingly friendly terms with Mr. Sidney Bloor, whom I put down, from the moment I first saw him, as an undoubted adventurer. He was always dressed in the height of fashion, and he had acquired the shibboleth of the up-to-date young man of the moment. He made languid attempts to kiss me whenever he found me alone. He found me one evening, some four months after our arrival in Brighton, alone in the sitting-room at about the hour when Madam was sometimes pleased to dispense cocktails. A spasmodic attempt at gallantry having been met and repulsed, he lingered to watch me busy repairing a hair-ornament which my mistress desired to wear that evening.
"Where is the old bird?" he asked confidentially.
"Madam is out playing bridge with some friends," I told him.
"What little gawgaws are you sending her down in tonight?"

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS
By Olive Barton Roberts
The fountain on top of Nancy's head kept running and running. Mix-Up Land kept filling up and filling up with water, and Jack Straw, the rogue, became more and more frightened as he saw every thing swimming or climbing while he couldn't do either—on account of having a peg leg.
He would have turned the magic ring on his left thumb and stopped the water, but he couldn't tell where it was coming from—whether a big wave from the ocean had washed over the land, or a cloud had burst, or a river had leaked up, or what.
First the grass disappeared, then the flowers, then the bushes. Everything that could swim was swimming, and everything that could climb was climbing, everyone who had a boat to row in was rowing, and everyone who had a raft to float on was floating on it.
Nancy and Nick and long ago been covered up with water. It had gone right over the tops of their heads. But Nick was marble and Nancy was marble (being changed by magic) and so they didn't feel a thing. Finally Jack Straw had only the tip of his nose sticking out of the water. "I do believe I'll have to turn my ring and change Mix-Up Land back into Apple-Pie Land," he said and signed a magic spell. But something better still happened. The ring slid off his hand into the water and it was never found again.
Before you could say "scat" everything was set to rights. The water disappeared and there were the mountains and trees and grass and houses and pigs and chickens and cows and churches and people and wagons and everything just as it should be. Mix-Up Land was Apple-Pie Land again and King Even-Steven was on the throne in his palace. And Jack Straw was back cobbling shoes—just as he used to be. And best of all, the twins were little boy and girl again, and on their way home.

A THOUGHT
Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.—1 Cor. 15:58.
Is it not God's will that we should stand steadily on to our goal in obedience to him, in channels of his choosing, whether in sunshine or shadow, in the cheer of spring or in the chill of winter, neither detained by pleasure nor deterred by pain?—Maltbie Babcock.

TUBERCULOSIS
Dr. Grass has positive proof that he is able to cure tuberculosis by inhalation of his "Climax" gas. The original of this treatment having discovered in the year 1881. Beware of imitators. For further information address THE T. F. MASON BUILDING, Los Angeles, Calif.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may have both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.

ENTERING THE FACTIONS

There appears to be two factions in the Democratic party of North Dakota. This is not as it should be. The party should lay down its platform and principles and those who stand by these are Democrats and those who do not stand by them are something else.

A party without fundamental principles is dead and no party can be perpetuated by office seekers and office holders. The offices are incidental and should go only to the men best fitted to carry out the policies of the party.

The State Democrat wants to see in North Dakota a platform upon which any 100 per cent American need not be ashamed to stand, a platform of the fundamental principles of government which would read somewhat like this:

"The Democratic party of North Dakota affirms its adherence to the constitution of the United States and holds the part of that instrument to a free government."

"We insist under the Constitution on equal rights for all and special privileges for none, and denounce a protective tariff that taxes one class of men for the benefit of another as a form of robbery—a method of taking property from the individual without recompense—something never contemplated by the founders of our government."

"The Democratic party of North Dakota demands that the Federal Reserve banking system be administered for the benefit of the people as intended by the party that passed the bill creating the same in congress and not by the agents of special privilege who have used the system to rob the common people of the country by huge and unauthorized withdrawals of currency from our circulation and enormous curtailments of credit."

"We stand for a foreign policy that will give the United States its proper place in the affairs of the world—and believe that this nation should live up to its great privileges which under God, have been extended to it for the advancement of humanity."

"We insist that the justices of the Supreme court be appointed from the patriotic, 100 per cent American of our country who have the welfare of the people at heart and not from those men whose life and time have been made them the tools of special interests."

"We insist that the power of the supreme court of the United States be definitely laid down by constitutional amendment of necessary—that there may be an end of indirect legislating by the judiciary."

The Republican party has ever been a party of special privileges and such a cancerous growth on the body politic never contemplated by the founder of our government.

A national policy along the lines indicated above would cure every ail to which we are subjected in North Dakota—all our ills are caused by special privilege.

North Dakota is a rich pasture for the special interests of the east. Here live the ultimate consumers, the men and women on whom falls the tariff burden.

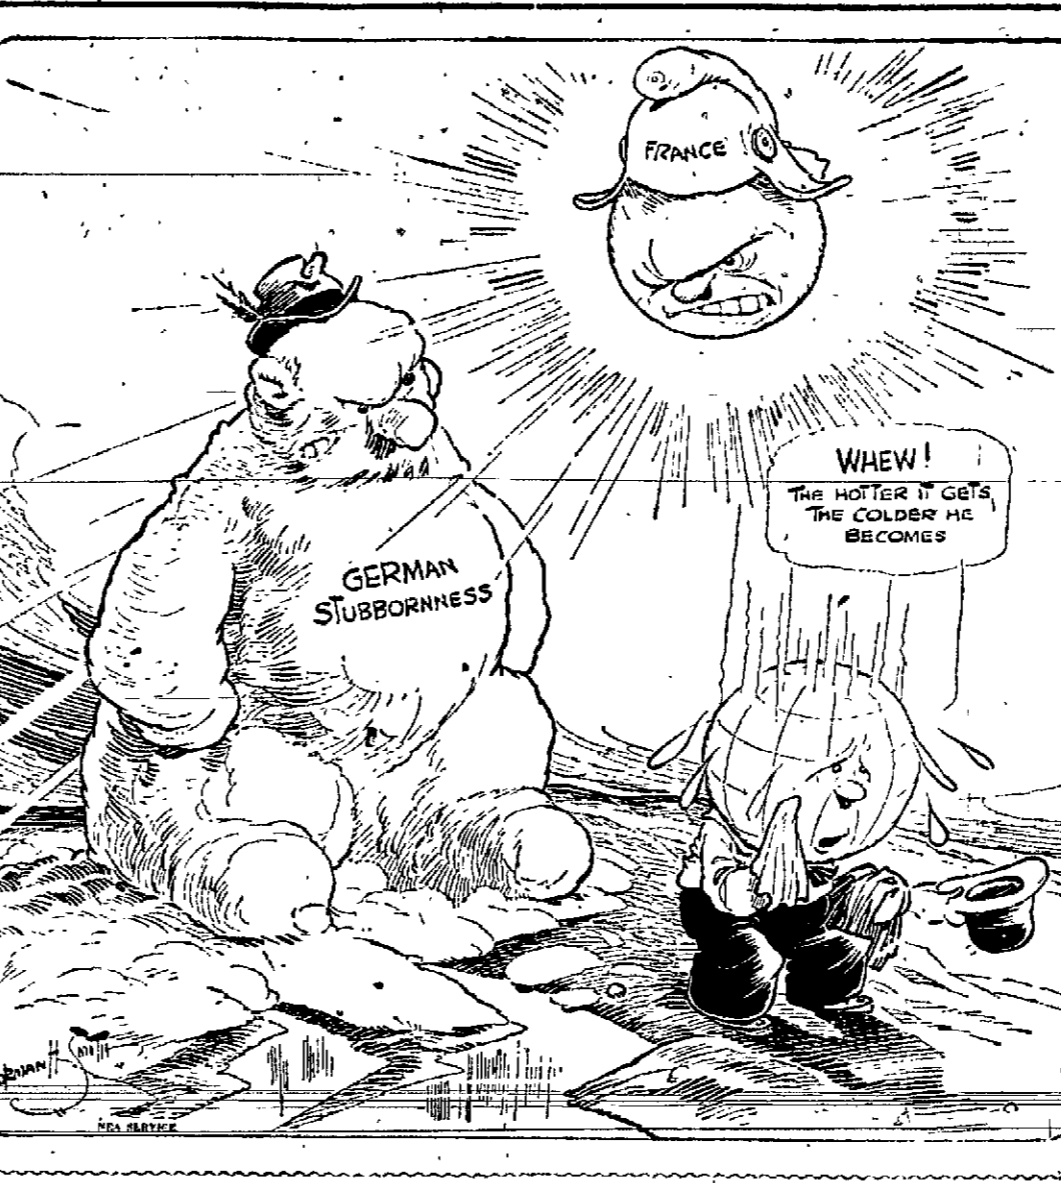

This is the state that can build railroads cheaper, operate them cheaper, haul longer trains than can be hauled in other states, maintain the roads cheaper and which notwithstanding these natural advantages pays twice the rates for service.

This is the state that has suffered severely by the withdrawal of currency from circulation and the curtailment of credits by the Federal Reserve bank and whose products have been cheapened to an extent that bankrupts the producer by the lack of a foreign policy.

The State Democrat believes that a platform similar to this, stating the facts as we see them here in North Dakota, should be adopted by the Democrats and those landing on the platform as set forth by a majority of the party of the State are Democrats and those not standing by the same are not State Democrats, Fargo.

A plot of Michael and another criminal, Paul Gont, to ruin the principal leader, Philippe Lutard, is frustrated by Sir Norman.

JANET'S VIKING
It was about four months after I had been in the service of Mrs. Trumperton-Smith, that I decided to rob her. I first went to her house, day by day, I felt the need of money for those luxuries to which I had become accustomed. After my disastrous visit to Paris, no news whatever had come to me from my husband. A slack period had set in at the dressmaking establishment where I had been employed, and I was informed that my services were no longer necessary. I spent a month at a manicurist's and a few weeks at a photographic studio.

Mrs. Trumperton-Smith advertised in the Morning Post for a companion and lady's maid. I won the post on account of my manners and appearance. My mistress was a lady of ample person and ample means. She lived in excellent style and apparently had plenty of money. She was a good looking 35 years old, still good looking in a florid sort of way, and well enough educated from the middle-class point of view. Men were her one and everlasting hobby.

We were staying at the magnificent Hotel at Brighton when the idea which I have mentioned, of robbing my mistress, first took definite shape in my mind. I should have bided my time, I think, but for two reasons. One was that the salary which she paid me was absurdly small and I saw no chance of saving anything, and the other was the very imminent fear of being anticipated. Mrs. Trumperton-Smith was not always as discreet as she should have been in her acquaintances.

At the present time she was on exceedingly friendly terms with Mr. Sidney Bloor, whom I put down, from the moment I first saw him, as an undoubted adventurer. He was always dressed in the height of fashion, and he had acquired the shibboleth of the up-to-date young man of the moment. He made languid attempts to kiss me whenever he found me alone. He found me one evening, some four months after our arrival in Brighton, alone in the sitting-room at about the hour when Madam was sometimes pleased to dispense cocktails. A spasmodic attempt at gallantry having been met and repulsed, he lingered to watch me busy repairing a hair-ornament which my mistress desired to wear that evening.

"Where is the old bird?" he asked confidentially.

"Madam is out playing bridge with some friends," I told him.

"What little gawgaws are you sending her down in tonight?"

"Whatever she chooses to wear," I replied.

"Are you going away?"

"Back to the City tomorrow. I'm my own master and all that, of course—like a week or two just when I want it—but one has to pick up a bit of the rhino now and then."

"What about the diamond necklace, then?" he suggested.

"My mistress came busting in a moment or two later and busied herself in making the cocktails. I went through into her bedroom to lay out her gown. It was perfectly clear to me now that if I were going to rob Mrs. Trumperton-Smith, I had better be done quickly."

The drinking of cocktails was concluded a little more quickly than usual, and Mrs. Trumperton-Smith joined me in the bedroom, full of what passed with her as usual. It was a quality, however, which was entirely superficial, and in a general way I found her disagreeable, selfish and jealous to a degree.

She withdrew the key of her jewel-case from a bracelet and passed it to me.

I selected the diamond necklace, earrings and bracelet, locked up the case and returned the key. My mistress' expression softened as she looked at herself in the glass.

She picked up her gold bag, looked inside to see that I had placed her handkerchief there, and turned away.

I went into the steward's room and had my supper as usual, and I also paid a visit to Mr. Bloor's bedroom and borrowed certain trifles which I proposed to use later on. I happened to know that both he and Mrs. Trumperton-Smith were engaged to play bridge after dinner at a neighboring hotel.

I contrived to leave open the connecting door between the bedroom and the sitting-room, and to be in the former when they returned for their coffee. Madam had come in for her cloak, and they were on the point of starting out again, when her escort at last gave me the cue for which I had been waiting.

"I say, Mimi," he drawled—he called her "Mimi" although she weighed fourteen stone—"I don't feel comfortable walking along the front with you in those diamonds. Leave them behind, there's a dear."

"Just as you like, dear," she said.

"Are you going away?"

"Back to the City tomorrow. I'm my own master and all that, of course—like a week or two just when I want it—but one has to pick up a bit of the rhino now and then."

THE SNOWMAN THAT WON'T THAW

sent meekly. "Perhaps you're right, especially if we go on to supper afterward. Here, Janet!"
I hurried out.
"Yes, madam?"
"Take these off—all of them," she directed, extending her arms and holding her neck. "I am going out and may be late."
I relieved her of the jewels. All the time Mr. Bloor was watching with a gleam in his eyes.
"If you will give me your key, madam, I will lock them up," I suggested.
"Oh, that will do when I get back," she said. "Put them in one of the drawers, Janet."
They went off together. I did exactly as I had been bidden, and afterward lingered in the sitting-room while I completed my plans. I had just come to a decision when there was a sharp knock at the door. The manager of the hotel—Mr. Leon Grant—made his appearance. He looked around the empty sitting-room.
"I understood that Mrs. Trumperton-Smith was up here," he said courteously.
"Mrs. Trumperton-Smith went out some little time ago," I told him.
"What time do you expect your mistress back?" he inquired.
"She did not say, sir," I replied.
"The last time she went out to play bridge, it was about one o'clock when she returned. Mr. Bloor is with her."
The manager nodded and turned away.
"Can I give her any message, sir?" I asked.
He hesitated, closed the door and came back again.
"I should imagine," he said, "looking at me attentively, that you are a trusted servant."
I was engaged as companion-lady's maid, sir," I told him. "I believe that my mistress has every confidence in me."
He nodded.
"To tell you the truth," he explained, "I am a little worried about your mistress' jewels. There was a small robbery last night at a hotel in the neighborhood, and I have had an indirect hint of warning from the police that there are thieves about. Mrs. Trumperton-Smith has the reputation of being very careless. I came to ask her if she would allow me to keep her jewels in the hotel safe."
"I should be very glad if you could persuade her to do so," I assured him. "I suggested it when she arrived, but Madam likes to take them out and look at them when she is alone."
"It is scarcely fair upon any hotel," the manager pointed out a little querulously. "Will you be so kind as to tell me where she keeps them?"
I showed him the case, although I said nothing of the diamonds in the drawer. He frowned severely.
"It is placing temptation in people's way," he declared.
"The door of the bedroom is always locked," I reminded him, "and you have a night-watchman. Then, too, we are on the fourth floor."

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

The fountain on top of Nancy's head kept running and running. Mix-Up Land kept filling up and filling up with water, and Jack Straw, the rogue, became more and more frightened as he saw every thing swimming or climbing while he couldn't do either—on account of having a peg leg.

He would have turned the magic ring on his left thumb and stopped the water, but he couldn't tell where it was coming from—whether a big wave from the ocean had washed over the land, or a cloud had burst, or a river had leaked up, or what.

First the grass disappeared, then the flowers, then the bushes. Everything that could swim was swimming, and everything that could climb was climbing, everyone who had a boat to row in was rowing, and everyone who had a raft to float on was floating on it.

Nancy and Nick and long ago been covered up with water. It had gone right over the tops of their heads. But Nick was marble and Nancy was marble (being changed by magic) and so they didn't feel a thing.

Finally Jack Straw had only the tip of his nose sticking out of the water. "I do believe I'll have to turn my ring and change Mix-Up Land back into Apple-Pie Land," he said and signed a magic spell. But something better still happened. The ring slid off his hand into the water and it was never found again.

Before you could say "scat" everything was set to rights. The water disappeared and there were the mountains and trees and grass and houses and pigs and chickens and cows and churches and people and wagons and everything just as it should be. Mix-Up Land was Apple-Pie Land again and King Even-Steven was on the throne in his palace. And Jack Straw was back cobbling shoes—just as he used to be. And best of all, the twins were little boy and girl again, and on their way home.

SLOPE PLAYERS ON ALL-STATE

Carson, Coleharbor, Hazen on Consolidated Basketball Team

Hazen, Coleharbor and Carson consolidated school basketball teams all have representatives on the all-state team picked by Coach Guetzloe and Prof. F. C. Spaulding at Valley City after the tournament closed Saturday night, with Hazen the winner.

The Hazen team was praised by a Valley City writer who said: Hazen won the title on their ability to refuse to recognize when they were licked. In their first game of the tournament they defeated Coleharbor 22 by 23 by getting the winning score in the last few minutes of play. In their second game of the tournament they defeated Carson 21 to 20, the winning score being gotten just before the final whistle after they had called time out to talk things over. The final game against Leonard was the third game for the winners and they repeated their performance by winning in the last few seconds. Their sawing throughout the tournament is proof of the value of the fighting spirit in any team, that spirit being the only reason for their winning of the state title.

After the final game Coach Guetzloe and Prof. F. C. Spaulding picked the all-state consolidated school team. E. Barry, Coleharbor, and W. Stabey, Hazen, are picked for all-state forwards; R. Scallor, Carson, center, and L. Nelson, Leonard, and Young, Hazen, are the guard selections. L. Nelson, of Leonard, was picked as the all-tournament star.

LOCAL MEN IN TOUGH MATCHES

Rodgers Meets Wrestlers at Van Hook and Minot

Stanley Rodgers, local wrestler, left today for Van Hook where he will meet Tom Asts in a wrestling match Wednesday night. Rodgers will go into the match suffering from boils on his neck, but has a $50 forfeit for the match and will go through with it. On March 16 he will meet Ole Johnson at Minot, the match being billed in Minot as for the heavyweight championship of the Northwest.

Thor Jensen, middleweight wrestler and boxer, will meet Henry Kaarsaari, the veteran wrestler, at Winona, Minnesota, on March 20 and Ed Miller at Biscay, Minn. on March 22.

Rodgers and Jensen are making Bismarck their permanent headquarters and have opened up the Bismarck gymnasium under the City National Bank building. The gym, intended as a business man's gymnasium, contains a wrestling mat, boxing ring, punching bag and other gymnasium exercise machines, lockers, shower and office.

Golf Champion Makes His Debut As Movie Actor

By NEA Service.

Los Angeles, Calif., March 13.—Like all champions, Walter Hagen, golfer extraordinary, has gone into the movies.

For the past month Hagen has given up the golf game as a business for that of movie actor.

It is generally believed that Hagen's debut into filmdom was to be of an educational nature. The impression prevailed that he would merely show the proper way to make various shots, also the incorrect way, and that the pictures would be showed up so that every golf enthusiast would have a chance to help his game.

College coaches in football and rowing have found the movies of great aid in perfecting form. Slow motion pictures are made of the men in action, and then the faults pointed out as the pictures are thrown on the screen.

There is no reason why such a stunt wouldn't go big in golf, particularly with Hagen doing the stuff.

However, it is said that Hagen has been playing the lead in a regular feature picture in which golf plays only a minor part.

Donie Buch Will Enjoy Defeating Ty Cobb's Tigers

By NEA Service.

Washington, March 13.—Trimming Detroit will probably be the most interesting thing in the life of Manager Donie Buch of the Washington club this summer.

It is a well-known fact that there is no love lost between the former Tiger shortstop and the present Detroit manager. The bad feeling will probably make itself manifest on the ball field this season.

It was Cobb who asked for waivers on Buch. Had it not been for the refusal of the Washington club to waive it is possible that Buch would now be doing service in the minors.

Washington needed a veteran utility infielder, and Buch was secured to fill any gaps that might occur in the infield. Now, fate has decreed that he be manager of the club. Cobb has persistent aspiration this year and his club looks to have a chance. Washington doesn't loom up as a pennant contender, but no doubt Buch will take great pleasure in seeing his team play its best ball against the Tigers.

BROWNS FEEL McINNIS LOSS

By NEA Service.

St. Louis, March 13.—Did the St. Louis Browns make a mistake in permitting "Stuffy" McInnis to be waived out of the American League.

St. Louis lost the pennant in the American League last year by the scant margin of one game. Unquestionably the Browns are one of the best clubs in the league. No team has a better chance for the 1923 pennant.

Odd as it may sound, the one debatable spot in the Browns' infield is first base. At that position the team has the greatest player of all time—George Sisler. But what about his condition?

Just prior to the all-important series with New York last summer Sisler injured his shoulder. He played against New York despite the advice of his physician. Had he been in form the Browns would have won the edge in that series and probably the pennant.

The Browns lacked a substitute for Sisler last year. There is some doubt as to his condition this year. It seems that a club with a chance for the pennant could have made no better move to fortify itself than to take McInnis on for the coming season.

As an understudy to Sisler and a

Percy Flen, Captain-Guard.

pinch hitter, McInnis would have been invaluable. Incidentally his addition to the lineup would have greatly strengthened the morale of the club, which may be shot to pieces if Sisler's injury should handicap his play.

NIGHT HAWKS, GIANTS WIN

Victors on Local Bowling Alleys Friday Night

The Night Hawks and the Giants took the honors at the local bowling alley Friday night when the Night Hawks took two out of three games from the Lions and the Giants took two out of three from the Wild Cats. The Wild Cats were entitled to all three games with the Giants but as the Giants run in a new bowler in place of one of their regular bowlers they took two from the Wild Cats. J. Christensen was the star of the evening getting a total of 620 for the three games and 247 for a single game.

GIANT FROM ARGENTINE WINS OVER BRENNAN

New York, Mar. 13.—Lewis Angel Firpo, a giant in fighting mould, was established today in the front ranks of heavyweight title contenders. The big man from the Argentine last night hurled the first obstacle leading to a match with Jack Dempsey, champion, when he knocked out Bill Brennan, veteran of the ring, in the 12th round of a 15-round match at Madison Square Garden.

The South American's next engagement, according to Tex Rickard, promoter, is likely to be with the winner of the Floyd Johnson, Jess Willard match scheduled to take place at the Yankee stadium May 12.

Billy Evans Says—

Once upon a time most of the major league clubs selected one of the larger cities in the south for their training quarters. Often the selection was made more for the financial possibilities than the training advantages.

In the last five years there has been a decided change in the viewpoint of managers and club owners on this question. Several months ago a certain National League club announced that it would train at such a place. I was rather surprised because I was familiar with the place and knew it had little other than climate to offer.

At the meeting of the National League magnate in New York I bumped into the manager who had selected the city in question. I brought the question up and asked him the big reason after I had told him that outside of climate I didn't know a thing the city had to offer. He smiled and replied:

"During the first two or three weeks that is all I want—climate. The less society, the less life a town has the better I am satisfied. I don't fret if the place hasn't even a movie show. The players are there to condition themselves, and through the medium of baseball is the only way that can be accomplished.

"Too much society, too much life tends to retard a ball club rather than help it. Give me a town that has no race tracks, no night life, but plenty of real climate and a good ball park and I am contented. I like the movies and have no objection to the player killing a couple of hours each evening in such a diversion.

"In spring training I want my players to live baseball, talk it off the field and play it on the field. Too many clubs forget baseball the moment the game is over.

"It has been proved that two big league clubs after a couple of weeks' conditioning can make much more money by playing games in the big cities on the way north rather than making some big city the training camp and playing all the games there.

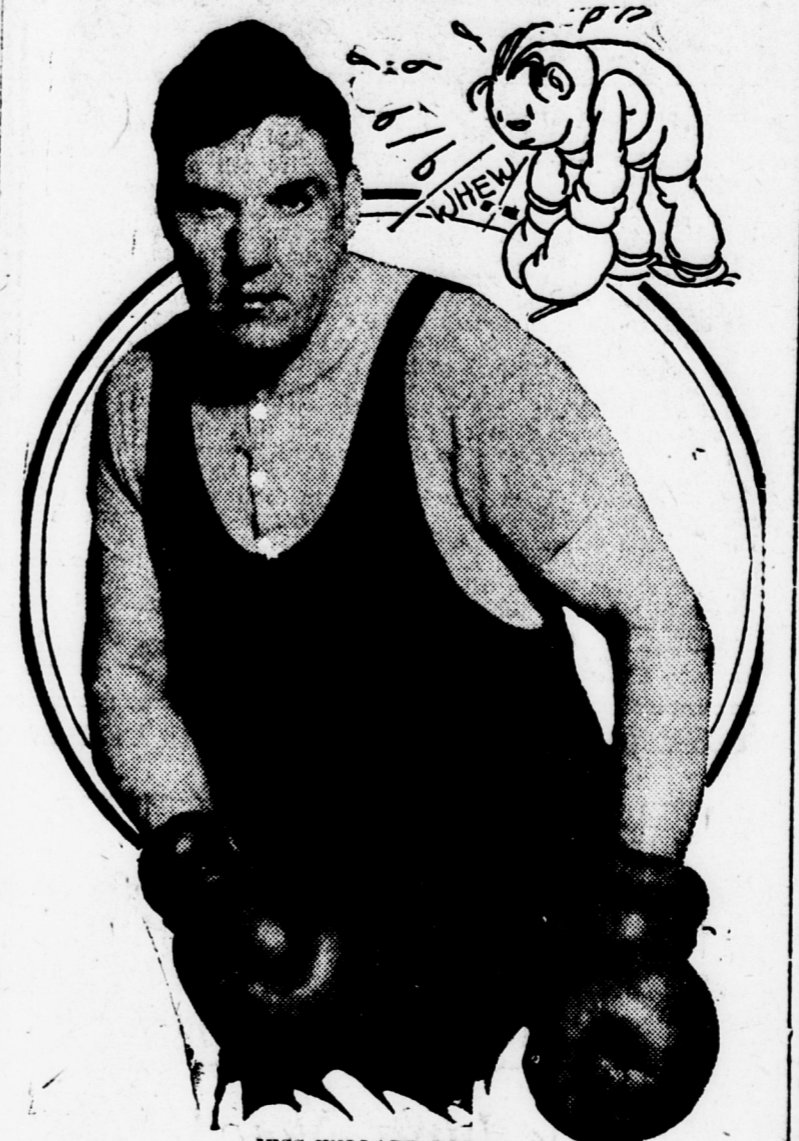

"Inside of five years I look for every major league club to be doing its spring training in some small southern city that has little other than a fine climate and good grounds to offer as an inducement."

Convincing arguments the National League manager offered me. He won me over to the small town stuff for spring training.

JESS WILLARD IS IN FAIR CONDITION

Whether He Has Chance Against Dempsey Is Another Matter

JESS WILLARD TODAY.

By Billy Evans.

What about Jess Willard? Has he a chance with Jack Dempsey?

Those two queries have been fired at me time and again since a return bout between Dempsey and Willard has been suggested.

Willard in many respects was a big surprise to me. While he is far from being in the "proverbial pink," as they say in the fight game, Willard is in pretty good shape.

The color of the ex-champ is that of a healthy athlete, his eyes carried the sparkle that bespeaks good condition, and while he carried some excess fat, the roll that I expected to see overlapping the waistline was missing.

In giving out such a weight I feel that the ex-champ is using the Cope system of weights to arrive at a given figure. He just thinks he weighs that much. I think he weighs a lot more. As a matter of fact I would be willing to wager that he was closer to 300 than 265.

Willard, when at the top of his game, was never a beautifully muscled athlete who impressed you. Neither was Bat Nelson. The arms of Willard and Nelson show but little muscle. Strength often lies deep, not on the surface.

I watched Willard box three rounds, but it was little more than an exhibition. He simply toyed with his sparring partners, so there was no chance to get a line on him from his actual work in the ring.

That Willard has made rapid strides in the last two months, however, was proved by a conversation I had with a well-known fight manager.

"When Willard first arrived in New York, all the third and fourth rate heavyweights in the town were anxious to work with him," said the manager. "Most of them knew Willard was out of shape, and no doubt all of them felt they might add to their reputation by putting something over on the big fellow."

"For several weeks some of the boys did make things might interesting for Jesse, but as he rounded into condition and began to judge his distance, his sparring partners began to disappear. Now none of the boys who was so anxious to work out with him will even put on the gloves."

Willard looks like a mighty healthy individual. So did Jim Jeffries when he met Jack Johnson.

Can a fighter past 40 have the vitality to undergo a grueling struggle? I seriously doubt it.

Willard looks good, but it may be just another case like that of Jim Jeffries.

Why Do South, Coast Produce So Many Stars? Cobb and Chance Tell Reason

By NEA Service.

Philadelphia, March 13.—In recent years many of the major league stars have come from either the Sunny South of the Pacific Coast.

Incidentally a great many of the big stars in the baseball call some small town home, rather than the big cities.

How so? Does the south and the Pacific coast offer more possibilities for the development of ball players? Is there more chance for the small towns youngster than the big city kid?

During the recent meeting of the American League in this city the question was put to Frank Chance, who hails from California, and Ty Cobb, who is the outstanding figure in baseball from the south.

Both seemed to have the same viewpoint. It was this: The more you play baseball the better your progress. The climate in the south and on the coast makes it possible for the youngsters of those two sections to play the national pastime two or three months longer than is possible in other parts of the country.

Both agreed that in the small town baseball was the chief amusement of most youngsters because there was little else to do. Also there was more room to play than the big city usually affords.

There you have the opinion of two of the big stars of the game on why the south and the coast produce a majority of the stars, and why the small town boy has a better chance at baseball than his big city brother.

SLOPE PLAYERS ON ALL-STATE

Carson, Coleharbor, Hazen on Consolidated Basketball Team

Hazen, Coleharbor and Carson consolidated school basketball teams all have representatives on the all-state team picked by Coach Guetzloe and Prof. F. C. Spalding at Valley City after the tournament closed Saturday night, with Hazen the winner.

The Hazen team was praised by L. Valley City, writer who said: Hazen won the title on their ability to refuse to recognize when they were beaten. In their first game of the tournament they defeated Coleharbor 22 by 23 by getting the winning score in the last few minutes of play. In their second game of the tournament they defeated Carson 21 to 20, the winning score being gotten just before the final whistle after they had called time out to talk things over. The final game, against Leonard, was the third game for the winners and they repeated their performance by winning in the last few seconds. Their showing throughout the tournament is proof of the value of the fighting spirit in any team, that spirit being the only reason for their winning of the state title.

After the final game Coach Guetzloe and Prof. F. C. Spalding picked the all-state consolidated school team. F. Barry, Coleharbor, and W. Stanley, Hazen, are picked for all-state forwards; R. Schloer, Carson; center, and L. Nelson, Leonard, and Young, Hazen, are the guard selections. L. Nelson, of Leonard, was picked as the all-tournament star.

LOCAL MEN IN TOUGH MATCHES

Rodgers Meets Wrestlers at Van Hook and Minot

Stanley Rodgers, local wrestler, left today for Van Hook where he will meet Tom Asts in a wrestling match Wednesday night. Rodgers will go into the match suffering from boils on his neck, but has a $50 forfeit for the match and will go through with it. On March 10 he will meet Ole Johnson at Minot, the match being billed in Minot as for the heavyweight championship of the Northwest.

Thor Jensen, middleweight wrestler and boxer, will meet Henry Kaarnsari, the veteran wrestler, at Winona, Minnesota, on March 20 and Ed Miller at Biscay, Minn. on March 22.

Rodgers and Jensen are making Bismarck their permanent headquarters and have opened up the Bismarck gymnasium under the City National Bank building. The gym, intended as a business man's gymnasium, contains a wrestling mat, boxing ring, punching bag and other gymnasium exercise machines, lockers, shower and office.

Golf Champion Makes His Debut As Movie Actor

By NEA Service. Los Angeles, Calif., March 13.—Like all champions, Walter Hagen, golfer extraordinary, has gone into the movies.

For the past month Hagen has given up the golf game as a business for that of movie actor.

It is generally believed that Hagen's debut into filmdom was to be of an educational nature. The impression prevailed that he would merely show the proper way to make various shots, also the incorrect way, and that the pictures would be slow up so that every golf enthusiast would have a chance to help his game.

College coaches in football and rowing have found the movies of great aid in perfecting form. Slow motion pictures are made of the men in action, and then the faults pointed out as the pictures are thrown on the screen.

There is no reason why such a stunt wouldn't go big in golf, particularly with Hagen doing the stuff.

However, it is said that Hagen has been playing the lead in a regular feature picture in which golf plays only a minor part.

Donie Buch Will Enjoy Defeating Ty Cobb's Tigers

By NEA Service. Washington, March 13.—Trimming Detroit will probably be the most interesting thing in the life of Manager Donie Buch of the Washington club this summer.

It is a well-known fact that there is no love lost between the former Tiger shortstop and the present Detroit manager. The bad feeling will probably make itself manifest on the ball field this season.

It was Cobb who asked for waivers on Buch. Had it not been for the refusal of the Washington club to waive it is possible that Buch would now be doing service in the minors. Washington needed veteran utility infielder, and Buch was secured to fill any gaps that might occur in the infield. Now fate has decreed that he be manager of the club.

Cobb has penchant aspiration this year and his club looks to have a chance. Washington doesn't loom up as a pennant contender, but no doubt Bush will take great pleasure in seeing his team play its best ball against the Tigers.

BROWNS FEEL McINNIS LOSS

By NEA Service. St. Louis, March 13.—Did the St. Louis Browns make a mistake in permitting "Stuffy" McInnis to be waived out of the American League.

St. Louis lost the pennant in the American League last year by the scant margin of one game. Unquestionably the Browns are one of the best clubs in the league. No team has a better chance for the 1923 pennant.

Odd as it may sound, the one debatable spot in the Browns' infield is first base. At that position the team has the greatest player of all time—George Sisler. But what about his condition?

Just prior to the all-important series with New York last summer Sisler injured his shoulder. He played against New York despite the advice of his physician. Had he been in form the Browns would have won the edge in that series and probably the pennant.

The Browns lacked a substitute for Sisler last year. There is some doubt as to his condition this year. It seems that a club with a chance for the pennant could have made no better move to fortify itself than to take McInnis on for the coming season.

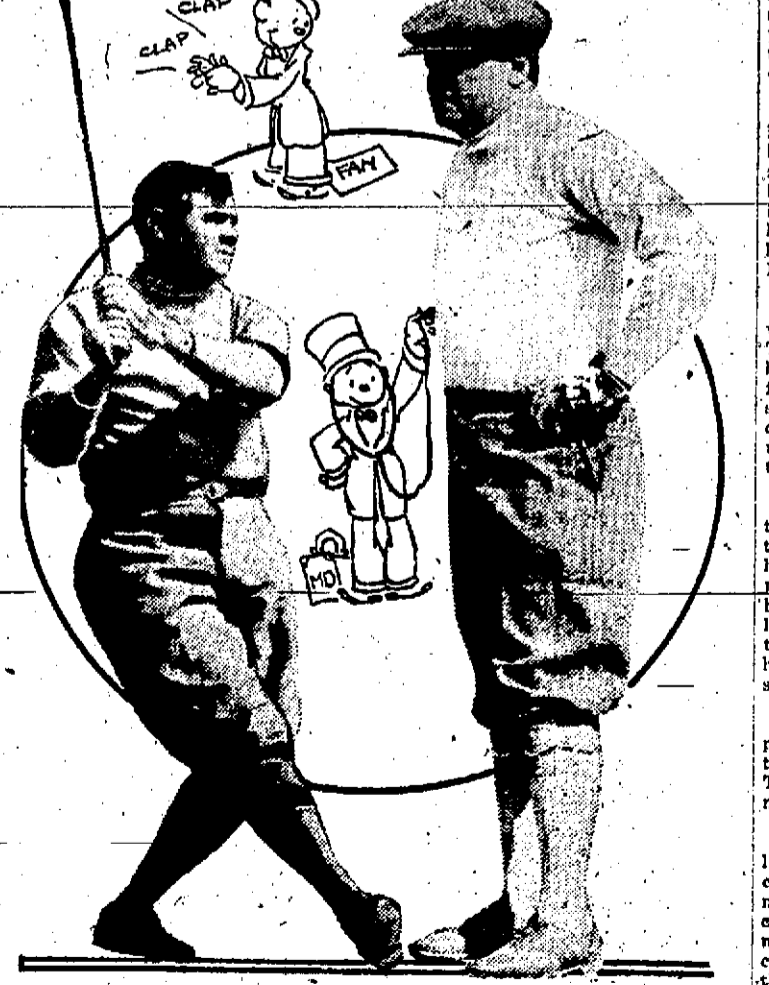

As an understudy to Sisler and a

Percy Flem, Captain-Guard.

pinch hitter, McInnis would have been invaluable. Incidentally his addition to the lineup would have greatly strengthened the morale of the club, which may be shot to pieces if Sisler's injury should handicap his play.

Look What Country Life Has Done for Babe

BABE RUTH—"AS WAS" (LEFT) AND "AS IS."

How about George Herman Ruth? Will Big Babe clout the ball all over the American League this season like he did in 1920, or will he make a poor showing like he did last season?

Will his threatened "flu" attack pull him down? If early condition counts for anything, it looks as though the doctored slugger will again be in shape to reign as "Sultan of Swat." The two pictures of Babe shown above were taken at Hot Springs, Ark., in March—one in 1922 and the other this year. Notice the difference. Looks like the quiet winter on the farm commuting with the kine and poultry has, it all over Babe's 1921-22 winter, with the bright lights of vaudeville as his guideposts. And don't forget this, when you recall Babe Ruth's .113 batting average in the last world series. He's not been barnstorming and hasn't the big suspension handicap of last year to overcome before he goes out to beat his 1921 record of 59 home runs.

Victors on Local Bowling Alleys Friday Night

The Night Hawks and the Giants took the honors at the local bowling alley Friday night when the Night Hawks took two out of three games from the Lions and the Giants took two out of three from the Wild Cats. The Wild Cats were entitled to all three games with the Giants but as the Giants run in a new bowler in place of one of their regular bowlers they took two from the Wild Cats. J. Christensen was the star of the evening getting a total of 620 for the three games and 247 for a single game.

GIANT FROM ARGENTINE WINS OVER BRENNAN

New York, Mar. 13.—Lewis Angel Firpo, a giant in fighting mould, was established today in the front ranks of heavyweight title contenders. The big man from the Argentine last night hurdled the first obstacle leading to a match with Jack Dempsey, champion, when he knocked out Bill Brennan, veteran of the ring, in the 12th round of a 15-round match at Madison Square Garden.

The South American's next engagement, according to Tex Richard, promoter, is likely to be with the winner of the Floyd Johnson, Jess Willard match scheduled to take place at the Yankee stadium May 12.

Billy Evans Says—

Major league managers now look on the small town for spring training purposes with a great deal more favor than they did five years ago.

Once upon a time most of the major league clubs selected one of the larger cities in the south for training quarters. Often the selection was made more for the financial possibilities than the training advantages.

In the last five years there has been a decided change in the viewpoint of managers and club owners on this question. Several months ago a certain National League club announced that it would train at such a place. I was rather surprised because I was familiar with the place and knew it had little other than climate to offer.

At the meeting of the National League magnate in New York I bumped into the manager who had selected the city in question. I brought the question up and asked him the big reason after I had told him that outside of climate I didn't know a thing the city had to offer. He smiled and replied:

"During the first two or three weeks that is all I want—climate. The less society, the less life a town has the better I am satisfied. I don't fret if the place hasn't even a movie show. The players are there to condition themselves, and, through the medium of baseball is the only way that can be accomplished.

"Too much society, too much life tends to retard a ball club rather than help it. Give me a town that has no race tracks, no night life, but plenty of real climate and a good ball park and I am contented. I like the movies and have no objection to the player killing a couple of hours each evening in such a diversion.

"In spring training I want my players to live baseball, talk it off the field and play it on the field. Too many clubs forget baseball the moment the game is over.

Convincing arguments the National League manager offered me. He won me over to the small town staff for spring training.

JESS WILLARD IS IN FAIR CONDITION

Whether He Has Chance Against Dempsey Is Another Matter

JESS WILLARD TODAY.

By Billy Evans. What about Jess Willard? Has he a chance with Jack Dempsey? Those two queries have been fired at me time and again since a return bout between Dempsey and Willard has been suggested.

During a recent trip to New York, Willard's training quarters at Madison Square Garden was one of my objectives. I wanted to get the real dope first-hand on Willard, wanted to form an opinion as to his chance with Dempsey should he again meet the champion.

I dropped in at the Garden just as Willard was getting ready to start his training program for the afternoon.

Willard in many respects was a big surprise to me. While he is far from being in the "proverbial pink," as they say in the fight game, Willard is in pretty good shape.

The color of the ex-champ is that of a healthy athlete; his eyes carried the sparkle that bespeaks good condition, and while he carries some excess fat, the roll that I expected to see overlapping the waistline was missing.

Willard says he weighs about 265. No one has ever seen him get on the scales to prove it.

In giving out such a weight I feel that the ex-champ is using the Cope system of weights to arrive at a given figure. He just thinks he weighs that much. I think he weighs a lot more. As a matter of fact I would be willing to wager that he was closer to 300 than 265.

Willard, when at the top of his game, was never a beautifully muscled athlete who impressed you. Neither was But Nelson. The arms of Willard and Nelson show but little muscle. Strength often lies deep, not on the surface.

I watched Willard box three rounds, but it was little more than an exhibition. He simply toyed with his sparring partners, so there was no chance to get a line on him from his actual work in the ring.

That Willard has made rapid strides in the last two months, however, was proved by a conversation I had with a well-known fight manager.

"When Willard first arrived in New York, all the third and fourth rate heavyweights in the town were anxious to work with him," said the manager. "Most of them knew Willard was out of shape, and no doubt all of them felt they might add to their reputation by putting something over on the big fellow."

"For several weeks some of the boys did make things might interesting for Jesse, but as he rounded into condition and began to judge his distance, his sparring partners began to disappear. Now none of the boys who was so anxious to work out with him will even put on the gloves."

"Why, when Willard hits you with one of those long arms of his it is just like getting swatted with a telephone pole, is the way one of the 'ham-and-egg'ers' explains it."

Willard looks like a mighty healthy individual. So did Jim Jeffries when he met Jack Johnson.

"Can a fighter past 40 have the vitality to undergo a grueling struggle? I seriously doubt it."

Willard looks good, but int may be just another case like that of Jim Jeffries.

Why Do South, Coast Produce So Many Stars? Cobb and Chance Tell Reason

By NEA Service. Philadelphia, March 13.—In recent years many of the major league stars have come from either the Sunny South or the Pacific Coast.

Incidentally a great many of the big stars in the baseball call some small town home, rather than the big cities.

How so? Does the south and the Pacific coast offer more possibilities for the development of ball players? Is there more chance for the small towns youngster than the big city kid?

During the recent meeting of the American League in this city the question was put to Frank Chance, who hails from California, and Ty Cobb, who is the outstanding figure in baseball from the south.

Both seemed to have the same viewpoint. It was this: "The more you play baseball the better your progress. The climate in the south and on the coast makes it possible for the youngsters of those two sections to play the national pastime two or three months longer than is possible in other parts of the country."

Both agreed that in the small town baseball was the chief amusement of most youngsters because there was little else to do. Also there was more room to play than the big city usually affords.

There you have the opinion of two of the big stars of the game on why the south and the coast produce a majority of the stars, and why the small town boy has a better chance at baseball than his big city brother.

HENRY GRAMBS SUCCUMBS TO PARALYSIS

Former Pioneer Hardware Dealer of Bismarck Passes in Erie, Pa.

Henry W. Grambs, a former resident of Bismarck, passed away at Erie, Pa., Saturday evening following a stroke of paralysis. He was 64 years of age.

Mr. Grambs, who is a brother of Frank Grambs of this city, came to Bismarck about 1880, was employed in the O. H. Beal Hardware store for a number of years. About 1894 he went into the hardware business for himself in Bismarck, latter selling his interests here and opening up business in Mandan about 1902.

He left Mandan about ten years ago, going to Seattle, Wash., where he and Mrs. Grambs had resided until a year ago when they went to Erie, Pa., where Mrs. Grambs' relatives reside.

Mr. Grambs had suffered three strokes of paralysis during the past two years. It was thought that his ill health was partially due to a fall from a ladder while at work in Bismarck.

He is survived by five brothers, Frank Grambs of Bismarck, William J. of Seattle, Wash., Lorenzo of New York City, Albert of Homestead, Pa., and Louis of Scranton, Pa., and one sister, Bertha of Scranton.

Funeral services for the deceased were held at Homestead, Pa., today. It is thought that Mrs. Grambs will make her home in Erie, among her relatives.

Milwaukee, Mar. 13.—Milwaukee today was digging itself out of the heavy snows which fell Sunday and late yesterday and except for out-regular.

In the state, however, there are many telegraph and telephone wires down and with railroad service impeded much more trouble was encountered.

Oshkosh and other inland towns reported some trains running last night. Janesville reported about half of Monday's trains running. Fort Jefferson and other cities on one division of the Northwestern road were reported without rail service.

More than 20 cities were without light and power as a result of breaking of the transmission line from the Kibbourn dam. Among these were Columbus, Reesville, Beaver Dam to Berlin, Uno, Horicon, Jefferson and Johnson City.

BUILDING IN NORTHWEST IS IN BIG BOOM

Report of the F. W. Dodge Corporation of building activity for the month of February says regarding the Northwest:

Contracts awarded during February in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Northern Michigan amounted to $10,419,000. This was the largest monthly total since June, 1922, and the largest recorded February total. It was three and a half times the January figure and more than double the figure for February of last year. On the construction started during the first two months of this year, this district is 69 per cent ahead of last year.

Last month's total included $5,121,000, or 49 per cent for residential buildings; $2,519,000, or 24 per cent, for business buildings; $1,339,000, or 13 per cent, for educational buildings; and $805,000, or 8 per cent, for public works and utilities.

Complemented new work reported in February amounted to $9,749,000.

Golf Courses Help Sell Land In Sunny South

By NEA Service.
Miami, Fla., March 13.—Southern capitalists have found a new scheme to use golf to advantage.

Golf has come so fast in the last 10 years that its devotees are numbered in the millions.

When golf enthusiasts figure on building or buying a home he immediately gives thought as to the golf accommodations in his locality. Therein lies the big idea of southern capitalists who have invested their money in real estate. Throughout the south, Florida in particular, when some big real estate venture is planned involving millions of dollars, the location of a golf course is given first consideration.

In Miami three big allotments have been plotted in the last two years. Each boasts a beautiful golf course that is completed and being sold, despite the fact that many other features of the allotment are just being started.

In the south realtors work on the theory that men in a position to pay big prices for real estate must have their golf. The idea is getting great results in the south.

DON'T BLAME THE CHILD

Don't scold your children for lack of control over the kidney secretions. It is not always the child's fault—in many cases it means weak kidneys and can be readily righted. Read this Bismarck father's advice. Wm. O. Baer, carpenter, 221 S. 6th St., says: "My little girl was troubled with kidney weakness and she had no control over the kidney secretions. She was nervous and peevish and was often restless at night. The complaint came on after she had recovered from Infantile Paralysis and it seemed to leave her kidneys weak and disordered. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills being so good for kidney trouble and thought it well to try them on the child. After taking them she got over the trouble and her health picked up at once and she is now strong and healthy." 60c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

UNCLE JOE MOVES

a photoplay the dramatic emphasis is even more pronounced, and the motion picture is one of the strongest attractions of its kind in general seasons.

The title of the photoplay refers to an ancient law, carried on the statutes of many states in this country, which enabled a father to will away his child from its own mother, to provide for its upbringing in whatever manner he himself desired. The cruelty of the separation between mother and child brought about through the operation of this ruthless law is shown in all its tragic possibilities in this motion picture. A bitter quarrel, caused by the father himself, has a sudden culmination in the man's mysterious death. Unknown to the wife, the erring man has provided that their child be educated at the home of his brother, who can see nothing but evil in the innocent wife. Presentation of conclusive evidence successfully unites the separated family, and the surviving brother learns that he has been wrong in his persecution of his brother's widow.

A fine cast of film favorites is seen in this Max Graf production, including Milton Sills, Jack Mulhall and Cleo Ridgely.

THE ELTINGE.
Betty Compson, Bert Lytell and May McAvoy are the featured players in "Kick In," Paramount picture showing at the Eltinge for three days beginning today, Tuesday. Garret Hughes plays opposite Miss McAvoy and picture fans who saw the picture were delighted to see the hero and heroine of "Sentimental Tommy" together in a picture again.

"Kick In" was adapted by Ouida Bergere from Willard Mack's stage play of the same name and is characterized by tense scenes, excellent acting and beautiful photography. The story is one that holds attention from the beginning to end without resorting to impossible or false situations. This production by George Fitzmaurice is a worthy addition to his large list of famous pictures. "Kick In" is a drama of the underworld and society. The locale of the picture is New York, where the rich man's mansion is often but a few blocks from the miserable tenements of the poor. The Dr. Coo picture is also to be shown at the Eltinge in connection with "Kick In."

P. M. SMITH PIONEER OF STATE, PASSES

P. M. Smith passed away this morning at 3:40 o'clock at the family residence on 415 Sixth Street after an illness of six months due to tumors of the stomach. He was 64 years old.

Mr. Smith came to this country from Sweden in 1880, first residing for a time at Red Wing, Minn. and later in Montana. In 1885 he settled in Bismarck where he has resided until the time of his death. By trade he was a carpenter. He was a member of the Yeoman lodge and a member of the Carpenter's union.

He leaves three daughters, Mrs. L. E. Gilbert of Hugo, Minn., Mrs. S. B. Bye of Fargo, and Miss Vivian Smith of Bismarck, and Harry Smith of Baldwin, two sisters, Mrs. C. A. Carlson of Glencoe, Minn., Nils Nelson of Waplesburg, Canada, and three brothers, C. J. Smith of Montana, and two who reside in Sweden. Mrs. Smith passed away in Bismarck about 12 years ago. Mrs. Carlson has arrived in the city to attend the funeral.

Funeral services will probably be held at the Swedish Lutheran church Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the Rev. Alfson in charge.

ISLAND LOST IN PACIFIC

Papeete, Tahiti, Mar. 13.—Easter Island in the Pacific ocean, 2,300 miles off the coast of Chili and famous for its ancient gigantic statues believed to have been the work of a prehistoric people, has disappeared according to the captain of a French merchant ship.

Although persistent rumors arrive here that the island sunk in the ocean during the Chilean earthquake no confirmation has been obtained so far.

The most circumstantial of the rumors received here thus far is that of the French sea captain who was seeking to verify his position tried to sight Easter Island but found nothing but water where the island should have been.

It is pointed out that information of French merchant ships is not always accurate.

TOWN GOES WILD

Beunos Aires, Mar. 13.—Beunos Aires went wild last night when the news was received that Louis Angel Firpo had knocked out Bill Brennan in New York. The bulletin bearing tidings arrived here only a few minutes after the fight ended. Thousands of people formed into processions.

TO REORGANIZE DAIRY CIRCUIT

Meeting Held at Commerce Offices Outlines Plans

Reorganization and concentration of the Bismarck Holstein-Friesian dairy circuit will be undertaken soon. At a meeting today at the offices of the Association of Commerce, plans were evolved by Louis Garske, John G. Schneider and others of the circuit and a committee of the association for co-operative effort.

A list of prospective members of the circuit was made out. The last week in March, Max Morgan, livestock extension specialist of the Agricultural college, in company with others will make the route seeking new members.

Heretofore the circuit, embracing as it did Kildee county, was too large to accomplish what it should. Under the new plan of concentrated membership it is hoped to build up the circuit materially.

The Association of Commerce, on invitation of the officers of the circuit, will aid in the work.

GO WHERE SUCCESS BEGINS

Rushing through a business course to save money is like stopping a clock to save time. When you graduate from Dakota Business College, Fargo, N. D., you've had more than text-book studies. You've practiced business dealings in fully equipped banking rooms and offices. You don't need "breaking in."

Standard Oil Co. has employed 117 D. B. C. graduates. They've made good in the leading Law Courts and in nearly 700 banks. Why don't YOU? Follow the Success Story next Monday? Write F. F. Watkins, Pres., 326 Front St., Fargo, N. D.

You can't fight the wind. You can merely seek shelter while it destroys your property.

It is folly to run the risk of heavy loss when a Hartford policy would protect you.
